How Fisher Resumed Work
Building Solid Values

By Arthur Brisbane

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 22—You cannot say of any place that it is the most beautiful place in America, but you can say truly that there is no more beautiful place than this in America, or anywhere.

A long park runs along the edge of the ocean, and beyond it a beach with thousands bathing in the warm ocean. The timid Northern eye, once alarmed by moderate loose, flappy one-piece bathing suits, "stands at gaze," as Henry James might say contemplating copper-bronze and mahogany-hued ladies on their way to and from the water.

Their nonchalance, the lowness achieved in the back and the height in the front, the gracefully hopping figures, all actinic-tinted skin except for a wisp of material, strictly at the equator, fill you with new admiration for female courage when you have seen ladies with frilled ankles and wrists bathing at Ocean Grove, and live to see this, you feel that nature has exhausted her surprises. Or, has she?

Certainly, no one can say now that marriage is a leap in the dark.

This wonderful Miami Beach City, not to be described, bewilders you at first sight. Great lagoons, canals, magnificent private houses and hotels, bridges and causeways, three miles long, connecting with the mainland city, tens of thousands of palm trees, with dangling cocoanuts, bananas growing in backyards, dazzling sunshine flooding everything and a cool breeze blowing from the ocean.

You look, and understand the young man who asked the wonderful girl, "Where have you been all my life?"

When you come here for the first time, and you will come, being intelligent, you will wonder why it took you so long to arrive and how your nation could own such a winter sun parlor, and you knowing it only by hearsay.

Venice, compared with this, is like an English sparrow compared with two birds of paradise and an ostrich, and as for the French Riviera, it is only a feeble imitation, whether you consider the brilliant sky, the blue water, the flowers or the groves of fruit trees.

Flowering vines and bushes here grow over the tops of houses, and bear, literally, millions of big flowers. When you plant anything, you immediately buy a long ladder, so you can keep it cut back within your reach.

When Charles Dillingham took his colored valet to gaze upon San Francisco's golden gate, he said to him, "Now, Charles, you are looking at the Pacific ocean, that reaches all the way over to China. It is much bigger than the Atlantic ocean, to which you are accustomed."

Charles replied, "Yes, sir, I see it is."

You look, but do not really see all, or one-tenth of what is before you. Years of work, by Florida's citizens, endless millions of dollars have built this marvelous city, from the great harbor to the many canals leading inland, and from this magnificent beach city to the skyscrapers that rise toward the blue sky, on the mainland. Men have lost millions here, and so they have done in every other place, ultimately making up all their losses.

From now on, men will MAKE millions here. This is not advice to buy, Heaven forbid that. But the water and gas are all squeezed out, and the solid growth and establishment of permanent values will proceed from now on.

Luckily, Americans never really retire. They die, or go on working, unless they are imitations. To that fact, Florida and the whole country owe this Miami Beach.

Carl Fisher, having grown very rich while young, decided to enjoy life, and came here long ago to retire, in the sunshine. He has been working like a slave ever since.

A white-haired man told Fisher, "I am trying to build a wooden road to that strip of beach, out yonder. My money has given out, and I don't know how I'll ever finish. I need that road to get my truck from farms and groves over on the beach." "How old are you," asked Fisher. "Seventy," replied the man, John Collins, once a resident of New Jersey. "Well," said Fisher, "if you are starting something new at that age, I'll start with you."

Fisher built the three miles of causeway and bridge of stone and concrete and wood, dredged sand from the shallow waters making deep channels and incidentally created islands on which millions of dollars worth of real estate have been sold.

Fisher built golf courses, a museum, an aquarium, a dozen hotels, polo fields, scores of houses. HE STARTED WORKING AND COULD NOT STOP.

He built among other things

CHICAGO MAN IS REPORTED IN CONTACT

Stealers to Deal With Him or U. S. Agents; a New Clue to Ladder

What Is Your Theory of the Lindbergh Kidnaping Mystery?
See Pages 6 and 7.

BULLETIN

Chicago, March 22 (AP)—The Daily News said today H. Wallace Caldwell, member of the Chicago board of education, had established contacts with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and agents of the U. S. secret service because of anonymous information which he believed came from the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby.

Caldwell was reported to have made two visits to the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J., recently.

The News said he was acting on instructions which came to him by telephone. Caldwell was informed, the paper said, that the kidnapers wonld deal only with Col. Lindbergh, with Caldwell or with secret service agents. Acting on these instructions, the News said, Caldwell had gone to Washington as well as Hopewell.

Trenton, N. J., March 22 (INS)—On the anniversary today of the 21st month of the birth of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., police explored one of the most promising new clues to his whereabouts they had uncovered since the son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh was stolen three weeks ago tonight.

An abandoned house close to the isolated Lindbergh home atop wooded Sourland Mountain was to be broken into by New Jersey State Troopers today.

MAY BE LADDER CLUE

There was evidence to indicate pieces of Carolina pine wood found in a barn adjoining the farm house were similar to that used in the construction of the ladder which the kidnapers supposedly used in abducting the baby from its nursery

Mailman Arrested in Wild Dash to Escape

Charged with stealing a package of 50 letters from a fellow carrier's desk in the central postoffice in State st., William C. Murphy, 44, of Milton, was arrested by Postoffice Inspectors J. J. Breslin and C. S. Anderson today.

Arraigned before Commissioner Jenney, Murphy pleaded not guilty and was held in $500.

The arrest was made after he is alleged to have made a frantic attempt to escape by running away. He was captured in the market district where, it is alleged, he hurled the package of letters into a market truck. The letters were recovered.

Chief Inspector Park D. Colvin, after numerous complaints of theft of letters, had assigned Inspectors Breslin and Anderson to the case.

Murphy, it is alleged, was seen taking the letters from his associate's desk and was allowed to start on his route in State st.

As he proceeded Breslin and Anderson accosted him and, it is alleged, he dropped his mail bag and fled, only to be captured as described.

Murphy has a wife and three children.

Crew of 50 Battling Fire on Ship Laden With Matches

San Pedro, Cal., March 22 (AP)—As her crew of 50 battled a fire raging in the third hold, the freighter San Angelo, loaded with matches, was making her way toward Balboa, Canal Zone, today.

Radio messages received by the United States coast guard here said the freighter Fairfield was standing by ready to give aid.

King Gustav Kisses Grandson's Bride

Paris, March 22 (AP)—King Gustav of Sweden was "perfectly charming" in greeting and forgiving his grandson, Prince Lennart, and the latter's commoner bride in Nice yesterday, the Prince was quoted by the London Daily Mail today.

The couple was given "the kindliest reception" by the King and the Prince's father, Prince Wilhelm, the Mail said.

Both his grandfather and father kissed the bride on each cheek.

SLEEP COSTLY TO OFFICER

Patrolman Harold B. Steed of Malden, who recently fell asleep in the boiler room of the Strand Theater when he should have been patroling his beat, was suspended for 60 days without pay today.

Commissioner Artemas A. Sweezey announced the suspension was "the last warning" and that a similar neglect of duty on the part of any member of the force in future would result in instant dismissal.

Steel pleaded guilty and threw himself on the mercy of the commissioner, saying he had tried the boiler room door and finding it open entered to investigate.

POLICE HUNT FOR 'BETTY' FRANKLIN

Flees Long "Exile" From Hotel Where She Has Stayed Since Gustin Killings

After release from luxurious confinement as "star witness" in the Gustin-Walsh gang slayings, Miss Irene Elizabeth "Betty" Franklin mysteriously disappeared today.

Her failure to appear at her Dorchester home and the fact that she left her clothing in the Copley Plaza and failed to return as planned caused police enough concern to start a search for her.

Miss Franklin, who was the only eye-witness to the slayings Christmas week in the Testa Building in Hanover st., was officially released from police custody at 9 a. m.

Miss Irene McAuliffe, policewoman guard and companion in "exile" since the shootings, left her at the hotel with the understanding that Miss Franklin was going to her home at 90 Capen st., Dorchester.

When she failed to appear, relatives inquired her whereabouts of Deputy Supt. James McDevitt.

HUNT IS BEGUN

He checked with the hotel and learned that Miss Franklin left there at 10 a. m. and told a telephone operator she would return at noon.

She failed to appear at noon and police? fearing that harm may have befallen her, assigned Lieut. James Sheehan and Policewoman McAuliffe to find her.

Hotel officials found her room just as it had been during her stay at the hotel. No preparations had been made for moving, they said.

The telephone operator was the only one with whom any message had been left and efforts of police to learn more of the plans of their witness failed.

LOST HER JOB

A call to Atty. Julius Wolfson, in whose office Miss Franklin was employed, revealed no trace. It was revealed, however, that Miss Franklin has lost her job due to the slayings.

"I have not seen her. She is no longer employed here. I know nothing about her," Wolfson said.

Although she was technically in custody, Miss Franklin was not under arrest. Police placed Miss McAuliffe with her solely for protection.

During her stay at the hotel she was afforded automobile rides, theater trips and other amusement for diversion.

Armed Bandits Rob Salem Storekeeper

Salem, March 22—Almost in the shadow of Salem police headquarters, two armed bandits held up Simon Goldstein in his clothing store at 17 Front st., today, and robbed the cash register of $15.

Goldstein was alone when the holdup men entered and asked to see some sweaters. As Goldstein turned one bandit thrust a revolver into his back while the other went after the cash. Then the pair fled.

American Couples Seek Paris Divorces

Paris, March 22 (INS)—Two American couples were involved in divorce actions here today. Lawrence James More filed suit against the former Margaret Hamilton, whom he married in New York July 6, 1927, charging desertion.

Mrs. Salvadore Benguiat, nee Mary Traynor, married December 3, 1926, in Brooklyn, was granted a divorce for desertion.

CURLEY FILES ROOSEVELT SLATE

36,000 Signatures in Suffolk; Veterans Cheer War Record New York Governor Made

Mayor Curley today personally filed the Roosevelt slate of delegates with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, and announced that 36,000 signatures had been gathered in Suffolk County alone.

The Smith slate had been filed previously by State Chairman Frank J. Donahue, and the Hoover Republican slate was to be filed late today by Louis K. Leggett.

Drawings between the Smith and Roosevelt groups for first place on the Democratic ballots will take place March 30 at 10:30 a. m. in Secretary Cook's office.

WAR RECORD PRAISED

The Roosefelt slate filed by Mayor Curley was complete for delegates-at-large and district candidates except for the eighth district which was to be filed before the "zero-hour," 5 p. m.

For candidates for delegate-at-large, 250 signatures are required from each of four counties. Mayor Curley said that the papers filed today bore more than this number from every county in the state except Dukes.

The war and peace record of Gov. Roosevelt was extolled by prominent veterans of American wars from the Civil to the World War before another overflow crowd today at the Roosevelt Forum, 333 Washington st.

Maj. Paul Hines, an American Legionnaire, also lauded the assistance to veterans by Mayor Curley, organizer of the forum and leader of the Roosevelt slate on which Hines is a candidate for delegate-at-large.

'RED TAPE BE DAMNED!'

Thunderous applause followed Hines' declaration:

"Every soldier that trod the soil of France of Flanders owes it as his sacred duty to support the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, for when Congress failed to provide ships and auxiliary craft, it was Roosevelt who declared:

New Decline Shown in Income Receipts

Washington, March 22 (AP)—Further declines in income tax receipts were shown today in the Treasury statement for March 19, when $15,009,609 was collected against $16,206,279 for the comparative date last year.

Receipts brought those for the month to $167,437,684 compared with $299,435,575 for the same number of days last March.

Montgomery City Hall Fire Swept

Montgomery, Ala., March 22—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed Montgomery's historic City Hall. The fire started last night in the attic and despite efforts of the city fire department and apparatus from Maxwell Field, the three-story brick building was ruined.

Maj. Norton Is Suicide in Cemetery

After brooding since October over the death of Col. Paul J. Norton, his brother, Maj. Henry L. Norton of Winthrop, was found with a bullet through his heart today on the chapel steps in Winthrop cemetery.

He was a boon companion of Col. Norton, wartime leader of the 104th Infantry, former secretary of the boxing commission and leader in military circles.

Police said he went to Winthrop Town Hall last night in search of Hugh W. Roberts, superintendent of the cemetery.

Unsuccessful in his quest, it is believed he entered the cemetery early last night they said. The death shot was fired from Norton's own army .45 calibre automatic.

Eugene Orcutt of Lewis ave., Winthrop, a town laborer, found the body as he took a short cut across the cemetery.

Norton conducted a bronze tablet business at 132 Broad st., and it was in that office his wife received news of the death from police.

Mrs. Bessie B. Norton, 54, is his second wife. Norton was 61. A daughter by his first marriage, Mrs. Brendon Lyon, lives in Montclair, N. J.

NO NOTE FOUND

The Norton home is at 799 Shirley ave., Winthrop.

Although no note was found with the body, Police Lieut. James Douglas said the position of the body and the revolver indicated that Norton took his life during the night.

Mrs. Norton said her husband did not appear at home last night so she went to his office early in the expectation of finding him there.

A few years ago Norton handled the state contract for bronze tablets to mark the route of Gen. Henry Knox on the latter's march to Boston during the revolutionary war.

SERVED OVERSEAS

Like his late brother, who commanded the 104th Infantry overseas, Maj. Norton also saw World War service with the Engineer Corps of the Canadian forces.

He attained the rank of major after the war with the United States Army reserves.

RAIN, HIGH TIDE FLOOD CELLARS

The heavy rain, falling on Greater Boston and over most of New England today, flooded many cellars, made highways slippery and dangerous, and threatened washouts at various points on all railroad lines.

This section was visited by rain, instead of the snow that had fallen to the westward, because the center of the storm moved well to the north of Boston, heading for the St. Lawrence valley, the weather man said.

Flooded street drains and catch basins kept city workers busy, emergency crews had to be rushed to several places in Boston and the suburbs, as low-lying sections became flooded and residents asked for help.

As the tide reached its height waves pounded over the breakwaters along the shore and the water ran down side streets into yards and cellars.

Northeast storm warnings were posted by the government from Boston to Eastport, Me. Clearing was in sight for tonight, according to the Weather Bureau, with tomorrow cloudy and colder.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS IN STORM AREA

Death Toll Mounts to 222 in the Tornado and Blizzard, East, South and West

Tornadoes, blizzards and electrical storms, sweeping over vast areas of the East, South and Central West, were responsible today for 222 deaths, uncounted injuries and incalculable property damage.

Battering rains and winds of high velocity added to widespread human misery and retarded the work of rescue and relief in Alabama and five other Southern states, plagued by a series of destructive tornadoes.

The death list grew as communities, cut off by winds and rain, restored communication with the rest of the world.

Alabama suffered the most heavily. A few hours after daylight, a check showed 169 dead there. Thirty were known to have died in Georgia, 12 in Tennessee and two in Kentucky. One was killed in South Carolina.

Hundreds were injured and scores told of narrow escapes. Highways were blocked by trees and debris.

HUGE RELIEF PROBLEM

The terrific winds sent countless hundreds fleeing from their crumbling homes and created a staggering relief problem for the Red Cross and other rescue agencies.

Over widespread sections of the East and Middle West blizzards and strong winds continued to rage today.

Snow blanketed parts of New York State, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Montana and the Dakotas.

8 DIE IN SNOWSTORM

In the Chicago metropolitan area alone five deaths were attributed to a blizzard which began 36 hours ago.

Indiana, Arizona and New York each report one dead.

G. A. Donnel, senior Government weather observer at Chicago, predicted that the abnormal winter weather will be on the wane today and gradual recovery of spring weather will begin throughout the Central States this week.

night, many strange sights presented themselves today and stories of heroism were plentiful.

Scenes reminiscent of war days were enacted at Northport, hardest hit of all. National guardsmen patrolled the ruins and no one was allowed to enter without a permit.

A telephone system was set up by the guardsmen and headquarters were established in the Northport city hall. Lines were strung across the Warrior river to a hotel in Tuscaloosa where a second headquarters office was set up.

Students at the university were pressed into service and joined in the search for bodies of victims believed buried in the debris. As the students conducted a systematic search, they were followed by county convicts who set to work cleaning up the area.

BULLDOG PATHETIC

A big white bulldog sitting in a torn and twisted automobile presented a pathetic picture. He looked neither to the right nor left and bared his teeth to all who approached.

One of the heaviest tolls was taken in a stable on Main st. in Northport where six persons were killed after taking refuge there.

R. B. Ray, one of the owners of the stable, was inside when the tornado struck. He grabbed the hand of Wilbur Snyder who chanced to fall lengthwise and was unhurt but Ray was crushed to death by falling rafters. Ray still clasped his hand in death, Snyder said.

Many residents of Northport saw the twister coming and making a noise "like racing automobiles." It was black and moved slowly, they said, and at times seemed to stand still, then move on.

COUNTRY CLUB WRECKED

The Tuscaloosa Country Club was wrecked and huge trees were uprooted and strewn over the golf course like so many bushes.

Two men among the injured at Clanton were carried to Thorsby, five miles away, for treatment, and just as they arrived there the twister doubled back, cutting a wide path through the town. They were spared on its second visit.

Herbert L. Kindred, American Airways pilot, and his co-pilot, P. J. Haire, told of a harrowing experience in battling through 60-mile head winds from Jackson, Miss., to Birmingham. Their ship passed over Northport a few minutes after the Tornado struck.

Kindred said their big tri-motored plane was lurching so they were almost thrown from their seats. Luckily there were no passengers.

Rancher Rides to Death on Tin Roof

Bisbee, Ariz., March 22 (AP)—An aerial ride with a tin roof in a windstorm that ended in the death of one rancher and injury of another is described in reports received here from Cochise, Ariz.

J. S. Jackson, rancher, and his father-in-law, J. T. Pile, lashed the sheet-tin roof of their adobe home to a bed with ropes, when the wind began tugging at the structure.

A terrific gust shortly afterward lifted the roof with the bed dangling to it. Sitting on the bed, the men were carried several hundred yards and dropped in a field. The fall killed Jackson.

Red Cross to Rush Aid to Victims of Tornado

Washington, March 22 (AP)—A multiple disaster relief organization was set up by the Red Cross today to succor the victims of tornados which tok so many lives last night in Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

Robert E. Bondy, national director of disaster relief, took charge at headquarters here. He will supervise operations of scores of Red Cross workers with headquarters at Birmingham, Ala., a lower center of relief at Montgomery, and other relief depots if they are needed.

North Carolina Negro Settlement Destroyed

Bessemer City, N. C., March 22 (AP)—Stumptown, a small negro settlement near here, was virtually wiped out by a wind-storm early today. One negro woman was badly hurt.

The church and parsonage and a dozen smaller houses were blown to bits.

Personal belongings of the residents were scattered for miles around.

15 Homes and 2 Schools Wrecked in South Carolina

Spartanburg, S. C., March 22 (AP)—A tornado swept across Spartanburg County early today, destroying at least 15 houses and two schools, killing one person and injuring a score.

JURY PROBE OF BUNGLING IN CASE URGED

County Sheriff and Detective Demand Action on Alleged Police Inefficiency

Hopewell, N. J., March 22—Chief Detective Elmer Hann of Hunterdon County is impatient, and a grand jury probe of alleged police "bungling" is possible. Hann said he believed the baby would be returned through Col. Lindbergh's private negotiations, but not until state police have withdrawn. The "noise" created by the huge search organizations and the stupid barriers put up by police against the child's return have not helped, he said.

An opinion that certain angles of the case ought to be considered by the grand jury when it meets April 12 was expressed by Sheriff Wm. B. Weam, in whose county the Lindbergh house is situated.

Atty.-Gen. William Stevens, who has taken over the duties of Hunterdon prosecutor because that office is vacant, said, however, he would not put the case before the grand jury, at least at this time.

Like most police officials active in the hunt, Hann believed the abductors were not local men, but members of an organized band of criminals.

A report that the Hunterdon County grand jury would investigate the actions of Col. Schwarzkopf was denied by Atty.-Gen. William A. Stevens.

"We have never contemplated any such action," he said. "Where the report originated I don't know. Only this office is qualified to speak on what is to be presented to the grand jury and we never for a moment considered bringing the Lindbergh kidnaping up.

"If any one said that we were, he was speaking without authority."

SECRET SIX IN SECRET HUNT

Chicago, March 22 (INS)—The Secret Six is conducting its own investigation into the kidnaping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., but its operatives are concentrating on clues in the middlewest.

Alexander Jamie, chief investigator for the crime fighting group of the Chicago Association of Commerce, made this disclosure today to International News Service.

Jamie said that to the best of his knowledge, H. Wallace Caldwell, former president of the Chicago Board of Education, is not representing the Secret Six. Caldwell was reported to have visited the Lindbergh home at Hopwell, N. J., twice.

"Our investigation is confined almost entirely to the Middlewest," Jamie said. "We are now working on one clue which looks promising—but it may turn out to be just another bubble. can't comment further on that for obvious reasons."

Operatives of the secret six are conceded to have an intimate knowledge of most of the criminal gangs in the Central States. The group has been responsible for the successful investigation of numerous kidnapings and bank robberies.

SALES TAX FOES MOVE TO PEN BILL AGAIN

Parley for an Immediate Vote Fails and Crisp Grows Skeptical of Outlook

Washington, March 22 (INS)—A new drive to rewrite the $1,096,000,000 tax bill in the House was inaugurated today by leaders of the opposition who spurned all proposals for a compromise.

The opposition spokesmen said they would demand sharp increases in the inheritance tax rates as a part of the "soak the rich" movement.

Negotiations for an immediate vote on the manufacturers sales tax provision of the bill failed when opposition leaders demanded that the inheritance tax question be settled first.

BILL IS STILL SHORT

Called into special meeting, the ways and means committee agreed to the demands of the opposition to consider the inheritance tax schedule today if unanimous consent would be obtained from the House.

Under the plan, the inheritance tax question would be settled after two hours debate and the sales tax then would be taken up with a vote scheduled for late today.

"The committee authorized me to make this request,' said Acting Chairman Crisp. "I think it is very harmful for the country the way things are going now and I want the sales tax question determined."

For the first time since the tax fight opened Crisp said he was pessimistic over the chances of the sales tax provision.

As a result of the committee's decision to eliminate all food, clothing, medicine and farm implements and other necessities from the sales tax, the bill is $104,000,000 short of the amount necessary to balance the budget, Crisp was informed by Treasury experts.

TO DEMAND VOTE

Crisp said that he would demand a vote on the whole sales tax provision when it is reached in the House.

Thus, if the sales tax is defeated, the tax on foreign oil and the levy on malt syrup, wort and grape concentrate also will be defeated.

Rep. Rankin (D.), Mississippi, one of the leaders of the opposition, attacked the committee's action in exempting food and other necessities from the sales tax as "legislative bribery" which is "being resented by the vehy members such amendments are designed to affect.

Rep. La Guardia (R.), New York, an opposition leader, proposed a tax on short selling of stock as a part of the bill

New York, March 22—Helen Keller, famous blind author and lecturer, is seriously ill at her home at Forest Hills, it was learned today.

Helen Keller

She was stricken last Thursday with an affliction of the gall bladder and was ordered to bed immediately. The illness is a recurrence of an attack suffered three years ago.

Physicians said if Miss Keller's condition has not improved within the next few days an operation may be necessary. They expressed no immediate fear.

New York, March 22—Florenz Ziegfeld, famous theatrical producer and glorifier of beauty, is celebrating his 60th birthday.

Florenz Ziegfeld

Still suffering from the illness that prevented his attending the dress rehearsal and opening of his new success, "Hot Cha," the producer was confined to his bed in the Hotel Warwick, where he could look across the street at his theater.

His suite was filled with flowers from friends and admirers, and his daughter, Patricia, 15, sent him a birthday cake. Patricia and Mrs. Ziegfeld, the former Billie Burke, are at present at Will Rogers' ranch. They talked to Ziegfeld by telephone and wished him speedy recovery form his cold.

in the Hopewell, N. J., home of the Lindberghs.

Two newly-fashioned saw-horses, one with a penciled New York address, freshly-cut shavings and wood chips were uncovered in the structure or nearby by a newspaper photographer.

The house itself, standing on a farm about half a mile from the road between Zion and Neshanic, appeared to have been occupied not long ago. Its doors were locked, but investigators set out today from the special police headquarters at the Lindbergh estate to force them.

Police at the Lindbergh home heard with interest about a New York raid made in an effort to capture Harry Fleischer, Detroit Purple gangster wanted for questioning about the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, but they would make no comment.

HUNT BABY IN NEW YORK

Meanwhile, the authorities were active in Long Island, New York. Detectives of Queens spent the forenoon making a thorough search of homes near Mount Olivet cemetery in Maspeth for a baby said to resemble the kidnaped Lindbergh infant. Information to this efect was said to have been given to Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police.

The writer of the letter said a baby "like the Lindbergh baby" had been left in the care of a woman living near Mount Olivet cemetery by a man who was "either German or Polish." It was understood a specific address was given in the letter, but that because of a confusion of street names and numbers in that section of Queens, detectives found it difficult to locate the address given.

Another anonymous letter to Col. Schwarzkopf informed him that Henry ("Red") Johnson, friend of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse, had lived at Astoria, Queens at one time. That letter, too, was turned over to the Queens police, but little importance was attached to it.

15 KNEW FAMILY'S PLANS

As for the police investigations, not a single definite clue was available today, according to the usual negative official bulletin.

Today's press bulletin was as negative and unpromising as any of the previous statements issued by Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey state police, who is in charge of the investigation.

"We know of no change in the status of Henry Johnson (the sailor suitor of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse) since he left these headquarters to be returned to the police authorities of Jersey City," said the statement. "There is no change in the status of Betty Gow.

"This office has no knowledge of the entrance into the case of Wallace Caldwell of Chicago, reputed member of the Secret Six."

Col. Schwarzkopf's statement further declared that "there have been no prisoners with battered faces brought into the Lindbergh estate for questioning."

Hopewell a Hangout for Gangsters

Hopewell, N. J., March 22 (INS)—A by-product of the stringent investigation into the world's most famous baby was the revelation by police that Hopewell, considered a drowsily ordinary and uneventful community until the Lindberghs and the subsequent abduction of their baby made it known throughout the world, was a rendezvous for gangsters.

Frankie Yale, later killed, started the invasion in 1925 by setting up summer headquarters about a mile from town and entertaining his racketeering friends there.

The infiltration continued after his assassination and Sourland mountain became the hide-out of many gangster chiefs, it was claimed.

Yale, Brooklyn gang leader, occupied the farmhouse once belonging to John Hart, who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

There is a possibility that the grand judy will investigate the invasion of the Sourland country by the gangsters. Old-time resident of a section whose traditions antedate the Revolution resent the intrusion of the shadowy characters whom gossip links with the "applejack" racket and worse.

"In a previous report it was stated a prisoner from Welfare Island had been brought to these headkquarters," the announce-continued. "We are not familiar with any activity of the Hunterdon County grand jury in connection with this case

"The persons familiar with the facts that the Lindbergh family would remain at the Hopewell home over Tuesday evening (the night of the kidnaping) were members and servants of the Lindbergh and Morrow families. In all 15 people know of this fact."

TRACE ANOTHER ADV.

Unofficial observers of the progress of the far-flung hunt for the kidnapers and the famous aviator's child believed an advertisement signed "Jafsie," appearing in some newspapers today and couched in similar mysterious terms as previous ones with the same signature, alluded to the abduction:

The notice read:

"Thanks. That little package you sent was immediately delivered and accepted as real article. See my position. Over 50 years in business and I can pay without seeing goods.

"Common sense makes me trust you. Please understand my position. Jafsie."

Neither Col. Lindbergh, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State troopers, nor Col. Henry C. Breckenridge, personal counsel to Lindbergh, would discuss the advertisement.

In some quarters it was regarded as a communication addressed to the kidnapers who might have started negotiations for ransom with one of Lindbergh's representatives by sending proof the baby was in his possession, perhaps a button from the child's sleeping suit.

PROBE PIGEON NOTE

Breckenridge, in answer to newspapermen's request he arrange an interview with Lindbergh, or himself tell of the latest developments in the case, admitted that his own efforts "have been futile."

He thanked the correspondents for the "sportsmanship and human forbearance" they evidenced in covering the story, but regretted he could not comply with their wishes.

Schwarzkopf, in his most recent bulletin, said the note found on a pigeon's foot and interpreted as referring to the Lindbergh baby abduction was still being investigated.

The pigeon's identification, he said, was illegally used for a carrier bird, having been registered in 1930.

It was not clear which pigeon he referred to. One was found with a mysterious note in Pennsylvania, and one in Connecticut. Previously police said after a check-up neither note appeared authentic.

JOHNSON STILL HELD

Miss Theresa Dersi was again interviewed at Hopewell, but the Wertsville, N. J., girl gave nothing further of importance, Schwarzkopf reported. She told a few days ago of seeing a car with suspicious occupants near the Lindbergh home the day of the kidnaping.

Henry "Red" Johnson, suitor of Betty Gow, Lindbergh nursemaid, the bulletin stated, will be turned over to federal authorities "pending the completion of immigration charges against him."

It was understood both he and his brother, Fred Johnson, who is to be turned over to United States officials on similar charges, will be available if wanted for further questioning by local police.

Both, however, were cleared of any connection with the case by Jersey City police. Despite this, Johnson last night was transferred to Newark, where he was again examined by Frank E. Brex, chief of detectives at Newark.

It was also learned that a number of new witnesses were questioned at Jersey City last night with regard to certain parts of Johnson's statement in which the sailor has steadfastly maintained that he not only had no connection whatever with the abduction but that he was in Englewood, N. J., sixty-six miles away when it took place.

At Newark where Johnson remained in his cell, visibly worn out by his three-day ordeal of questioning, police officials said he would remain there until federal authorities ask for him.

Lindy and Anne Near Collapse, Is Report

By SEYMOUR BERKSON

Hopewell, N. J., March 22 (US)—Nerves shattered to the point of distraction, the nation's idol of the air and his wife today faced the fourth week since their baby son's strange abduction without any new token of hope.

Certain phases of the police statements taken from Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor sweetheart of the Lindbergh baby's nursemaid, are still being re-checked by Jersey City police, although the sailor himself has been returned to his cell at Newark, N. J.

In the seclusion of their isolated home and amid the lonley slopes of Sourland Mountain, the Flying Colonel and his wife waited for a word of promise.

Friends who have been at the Lindbergh home almost every day since the tragedy, said today they fear that both the Colonel and his wife are at the breaking point.

Never has Lindbergh looked so care-worn and nerve-wracked, they said. And while both he and his wife have made a valiant struggle to restrain their emotions, especially in the presence of friends, Anne Lindbergh's eyes always bear the red traces of tears now.

Blaustein Believed to Be Hiding Lindy Clue

Pocatello, Ida., March 22 (INS)—Two Newark, N. J., police officers today said they would further question Ignace Blaustein, 30, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who told several conflicting stories about the Lindbergh kidnaping.

They said they believed that Blaustein, who previously declared he drove the Lindbergh baby kidnap automobile, was withholding information.

Raid Bronx Flat for Purple Gang Leader

New York, March 22 (INS)—Thirty detectives crashed into an apartment in the Bronx today in search of Harry Fleischer, alleged leader of the notorious "purple gang" of Detroit, who is wanted for questioning in connection with the case. However, Fleischer was not there—apparently.

The detectives found in the apartment a man who gave his name as Walter Cohn, two women and an 8-year-old boy.

Police took Cohn into custody and, after questioning him, sent for photographs of Fleischer as a final check-up on Cohn's identity. Cohn denied knowing Fleischer. He later was released.

The raid followed an all-night vigil. Detectives, acting on a mysterious tip, surrounded the place—even stationed themselves on the roof.

Entrance to the apartment was gained by a detective posing as a messenger boy. A card was found in the apartment bearing the address of Greenbush, near Detroit. This was the only clue linking the place with Fleischer—if, indeed, it did that.

Sohn said he was a jewelry salesman, then changed this, saying he used to be a pugilist. Fleischer also was a pugilist.

New Jersey authorities have never made public their reason for wanting to question Fleischer.

Fleischer Wanted in 3 Murders in Detroit

Detroit, March 22 (AP)—Harry Fleischer, one time member of Detroit's "Purple Gang," sought by New York police today 1 na raid on a Bronx apartment house, is wanted here in connection with the killing of three racketeers in the Collingwood apartments.

Fleischer, who occasionaly calls himself Louis Fleisch, has a record of 21 arrests and four convictions in Detroit, most of them in prohibition or robbery cases.

Twister, Like 'Ball of Fire,' Cuts Wide Death Path

Northport, Ala., March 22 (INS)—The twister that swooped down from leaden skies and cut a wide swath of death and destruction four miles through Northport was described by survivors today as resembling "a huge ball of fire encircled by dense smoke."

The full force of the blast struck Watermelon rd. on the outskirts, after wrecking a cott gin, several sandwich shops, a filling station and all other structures on that highway.

The twister swept a four-mile path through the town. One of the many structures leveled was the Tuscaloosa County training school for Negroes. Two teachers and a student were killed and many injured.

Fires broke out in the path of the wind funnel.

"Huge timbers hurled 20 feet in the air told me it was a twister," said Wilburn B. Lyon.

"It was funnel-shaped but I couldn't see it twisting until it got close enough to start knocking down houses.

"When we saw the timbers flying in the air and the twister passed on down the railroad track we ran to the spot and found 40 houses razed."

Joe Holliday of Columbiana said the cyclone hit about 5:30 p. m.

"It leveled everything in its path for about 150 yards on each side," he said. "About 40 houses were smeared, and nobody knows how many people were killed and are still under the ruins of their homes."

Eyewitness and Wife See Their Home Blown to Atoms

Tuscaloosa, Ala., March 22 (AP) The following eyewitness story was written by Will Radien, whose home was demolished by the tornado which struck Northport, Ala.:

"I was in my house, my wife and I, when we first heard the thing coming. It sounded like a freight train. In fact, I thought it was, since I live close to the tracks.

"My wife got scared and flustered—you know how women are and she started running around in the open, but timbers from houses and limbs of trees were flying through the air so I dressed, grabbed her and we tried to get to a big white house across the field.

"We didn't get more than 100 yards, though, when it hit us, so I grabbed her and we lay down between two cotton rows. I looked back at my little house—it was blown to pieces, and houses all around it looked like they were shooting straight up.

"I know we'd have been killed if we hadn't got out of the house when we did. It sure was terrible.

"I have a stepson, Arthur White, over there somewhere, but I don't know where he is. He said he was going to Moundville. I hope he did.

"I was not hurt very bad. My foot and leg were injured and my wife only got her hand hurt.

"I guess we were lucky to get out alive."

WEYMOUTH SNOW SHOVELERS GET 'PAY' IN TAX RECEIPTS

ROADS THAT LEAD OUT IN KIDNAPING MYSTERY

PRIEST HAD DEADLY FEAR OF GERMS, WITNESSES SAY

SYSTEM FLAYED IN AGED MAN'S JAIL CASE

Collectors Defy Selectmen in Stormy Meeting Attended by 200 Roused Citizens

WHAT IT COSTS to be arrested for not paying $3 poll tax in Weymouth:

Board at jail (6 hours)	$1.75
Poll tax warrant	3.00
Old age assistance warrant	1.90
Arrest on first warrant	2.00
Arrest on second warrant	2.00
Custody of body	4.00
Mileage, Weymouth-Dedham	3.20
	$17.85
Rebate on boar' bill after protest	1.50
	$16.35

Weymouth residents, already aroused over the charges of $17.85 cents assessed John Buckley, 76, for his poll tax and costs, including his board for six hours in jail, were given new ground of protest today.

Several unemployed men declared they received no pay for work for the town at the time of the first snowfall several weeks ago.

When they opened their pay envelopes, they said, instead of finding a few dollars with which to buy food for their families, they found pink slips—receipts for poll taxes. This was the first they knew they were working out their taxes.

$1.50 "BOARD" REBATE

The Buckley case drew 200 citizens to the selectmen's meeting last night, but all that came of it was a reduction in Buckley's board charge from $1.75 to 25 cents. The other costs remained.

Buckley had refused to pay the extra dollar assessed with the poll tax for old-age assistance, because he claimed he was in need of assistance himself and had failed to get it.

Tax Collector Frank W. Holbrook told the selectmen he could not say at present just what items made the total assessment $17.85, but Deputy Tax Collector Clarence Pratt supplied this information, as follows:

Board at jail, $1.75; warrant for poll tax, $3; warrant for old age assistance, $1.90; arrest on first warrant, $2; arrest on second warrant, $2; custody of body, $4; mileage between Weymouth and Dedham jail, $3.20.

DEFIES SELECTMEN.

The jail board cost was reduced when the selectmen called attention to the fact that Buckley was in jail only six hours before his grandson heard of his predicament and paid the necessary charges. He will be refunded the amount of the reduction, $1.50.

Holbrook, who receives six mills on each $1 of taxes collected, refused to tell the selectmen how much he receives in adition to this.

William Hannaford, chairman of the board of selectmen, asked Holbrook:

"When you have a similar case to this of Mr. Buckley, will you bring them before the selectmen and let us investigate and act upon them so that an abatement of the tax can be arranged."

Holbrook refused, saying:

"I am elected by the people. I do not have to answer to the selectmen. Despite that, I think a man 70 years or older should not have to pay a poll or old age assistance tax. Of course, I have no way of knowing just how old these people are until after an investigation."

300,000 Receive Jobs in National Drive

New York, March 22 (AP)—President Hoover received figures today showing nearly 300,000 Americans have been placed in wage-earning positions as the result of the united action campaign for a million jobs.

The drive is sponsored by the American Legion, its auxiliary, the American Federation of Labor and the Association of National Advertisers.

Death Takes Former Springfield Priest

Springfield, March 22 (AP)—Rev. Anthony Dalla Porta, 57, founder of the Italian Catholic Church of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel, died today of a heart attack in Waltham. The body will be brought here and the funeral will take place in St. Michael's Cathedral Monday. Bishop O'Leary will take part in the service.

State Control Plan Scored by Volstead

New Haven, Ct., March 22 (AP)—Andrew Volstead, father of the national enforcement act, asserted today that the plan to refer prohibition to state control would mean repeal.

"There can be no such thing as a group of states remaining dry while another group is wet," he said in an article in the Yale Daily News.

NEW U. S. JUDGE TAKES OATH

U. S. Judge Hugh D. McLellan of Lexington, formerly of Belmont, was sworn in as a justice of the federal court today before an audience that filled to overflowing the first session of the criminal courtroom in the Federal building. The oath was administered by Clerk James S. Allen.

Judge James A. Lowell, who presided, welcomed Judge McLellan.

Most of those present were municipal court justices, lawyers, attaches of the Federal building and business men.

Seated beside Judge Lowell on the bench were Judges Elisha Brewster, Clarence Hale of New Hampshire, Ira L. Letts of Providence and Judge McLellan.

Among the guests were Mrs. Nina P. McLellan, wife of Judge McLellan, and their daughters, Janet and Nancy; his brother, Atty. W. H. McLellan of Toledo, O.; a sister, Mrs. J. F. Preston of Portland, Me., and the judge's law partner, Bartholomew J. Brickley.

Gang Battle Rumor Alarms North End

Police had visions of a new gang battle in the North End today when headquarters received an anonymous phone call that there had been a shooting in North st. Headquarters rushed a police car and six officers to the address given and the North End station dispatched four men in the patrol wagon.

The police couldn't find any shooting or anybody who had heard about a shooting. The police cars tied up market traffic in North st. for 20 minutes.

POLICE HIT HARD BY BIG BLAZE

Police work in Cambridge today was in confusion, the result of a four-alarm fire which destroyed police headquarters in Central sq. at an early hour, cut off inter-station communication and destroyed priceless police and city departmental records.

Plans for establishing a temporary police headquarters were discussed while the fire still burned, during a conference between Mayor Richard M. Russell and city officials in the former's home in Highland st.

Meanwhile, a makeshift police headquarters was set up in the Brattle sq. station, with telephone men working to install trunk lines and a switchboard, so that all Cambridge stations and the public might be linked together again.

The Public Welfare Department, which also had quarters in the burned building, set up temporary headquarters in the Cambridge Home for the Aged and Infirm in Concord ave.

These removals included the damaged teletype and the police switchboard which, however, can speedily be put in working order and installed.

The city physician, who had quarters in the burned building, will be housed in City Hall temporarily, as will the election commissioners.

The loss was estimated at more than $100,000. Many valuable records, including fingerprints and photographs, were lost. Several priceless Civil War flags and other war trophies in the quarters of the American Legion and the Disabled Veterans on the fourth floor were destroyed.

Laddermen Edward Daisy and William Dyer were injured.

SEEKS TO STOP DRY LAW FUNDS

Washington, March 22 (AP)—Senator Blaine (R., Wis.) today sought a vote on withdrawal of prohibition enforcement funds while wet leaders circulated a petition asking the judiciary committee to report on repeal resolutions.

More than 25 names were reported to have been signed to the petition at noon.

MacMurray Heads Packard Paint Co.

Al MacMurray, until recently vice president and sales manager of the Norfolk Paint & Varnish Co., is now president and directing head of the Packard Paint & Varnish Co. With him are associated Michael Stone, treasurer, Eugene Canfield and Harry Stone, vice presidents and Otto Anderson, superintendent. Mr. Anderson has been in the paint and varnish business 40 years.

Before establishing the Norfolk Paint & Varnish Co., MacMurray was sales and advertising manager of Wadsworth-Howland Co.

Hold Impersonator of Upton Sinclair

Keene, N. H., March 22 (AP)—A man who described himself as Charles J. Adams, 30, of Riverside, Cal., and who, police say, was impersonating Upton J. Sinclair, the author, at a tavern in Alstead, was held in default of $500 bail on a charge of defrauding the hotel.

Adams, who said he was a chauffeur, had been registered, police said, as Sinclair, and had a number of cards under the author's name.

Ruth Judd Back in Death Cell After Court Row

Phoenix, Ariz., March 22 (INS)—After a sensational scene in a Phoenix courtroom, Winnie Ruth Judd, convicted "double trunk" murderess, was back today in the death cell of Arizona state prison in Florence.

Mrs. Judd, accused of killing her friends, Agnes Ann Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson, and shipping their bodies in trunks to Los Angeles was brought here from Florence in the battle of her attorneys to force the state to pay the costs of an appeal on the ground that Mrs. Judd is a pauper.

Successful in their battle, her attorneys planned to press their appeal for a new trial for Mrs. Judd, who was found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Leroi and sentenced to be hanged.

When County Attorney Lloyd Andrews arose to talk yesterday during the hearing Mrs. Judd leaped from her seat and screamed:

"I'm here to talk and I'm going to talk. You know very well you are trying to protect a political friend in this case."

Her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, tried to pull her down into her seat and finally attempted to place his hand over her mouth.

Judge Howard Speakman ordered her to be silent, but she kept shouting at Andrews until Dr. Judd and county jail matrons carried her, screaming and hysterical, back to a cell.

QUEALY DEB TO WED LONDONER

San Francisco, March 22 (INS)—Jackie Quealy, 24, San Francisco society girl and Junior League tap dancer, and Woolf Barnato, 36, of London, millionaire automobile manufacturer and member of the famous diamond family, have filed notice of intentions to wed.

Surrounded by the utmost secrecy the notice was filed in City Hall. According to plans of the couple, they will be married here Wednesday and leave immediately for Los Angeles to board the Empress of Britain for a honeymoon cruise to London where they will make their home.

THREE TRUCKS CRASH; 1 HURT

Fairfield, Ct., March 22 (AP)—If there are any poles left after today in the vicinity of police headquarters it won't be the fault of Massachusetts trucks.

Within a half hour three trucks smashed into as many poles as they rounded an icy bend near police headquarters. Frank Maloney of Dedham, Mass., was seriously hurt when hit by a truck driven by Alfred Gunn of Springfield, Mass., as he leaped from his own vehicle, which had skidded into a pole.

FIGHT LOOMS ON WOOD RICHES

New York, March 22 (AP)—Indications of possible contest over the fortune left by Mrs. Ida Wood, 95-year-old recluse who died 10 days ago in the room in which she had lived in apparent squalor with about a million dollars cached about her, came before surrogate court today when two groups of claimants asked for administration of the estate.

Mrs. Wood, the widow of Benjamin Wood, made her last will in 1889, leaving her estate to her daughter, Emma and her sister, Mary E. Mayfield. Both are dead.

Attorneys for Blanche Wood Shields, granddaughter of Benjamin Wood by his first marriage, and Henry Wood, great grandson by the same descent, asked that they be appointed to administrate the estate for themselves and Mrs. Shield's sister, Gertrude A. Wood, on the ground they are next of kin Benjamin Wood, creator of the fortune.

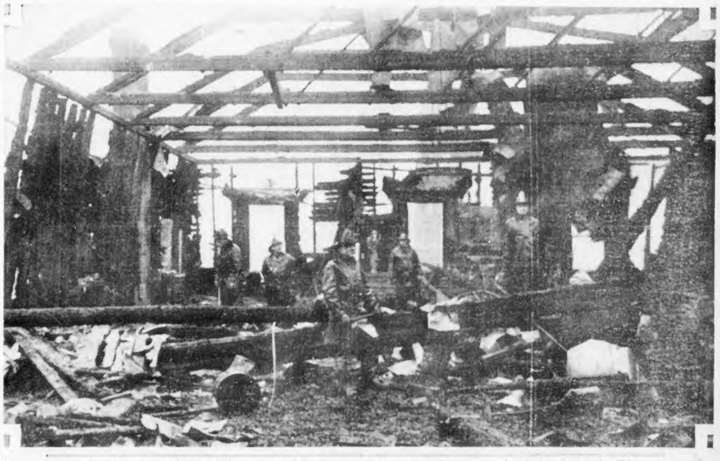
Otis F. Wood, nephew of Mrs. Wood, who was appointed her guardian last fall, asked to be appointed administrator for himself and nine other claimants, all blood relatives.

Seek Woman's Body in Airplane Crash

Steubenville, O., March 22 (AP)—Search was continued today for the body of Mrs. Carol S. Cole, St. Louis physician, missing lone passenger of a Transcontinental Western Airways plane that crashed in the Ohio river, drowning the pilot.

The body of Pilot Hal George, 31, of Columbus, entangled in the shrouds of his parachute, was recovered in 15 feet of water.

CAMBRIDGE LEGION QUARTERS REDUCED TO RUINS



Rooms in the Cambridge Municipal Building occupied by Cambridge Post of the Legion, photographed today after last night's disastrous fire had been conquered. Police say the blaze, which caused $100,000 damage and almost completely disrupted police communications, started in this room on the top floor of the building. Invaluable Civil War flags and other war trophies were destroyed. Rogues' gallery photos and fingerprint records in floors below were also lost. (Staff photo.)

TELL OF BUYING DISINFECTANT BY THE QUART

Fr. Brown's Long Hair Is Also Described in the Cousins' Suit to Break His Will

The late Rev. Dennis W. Brown, pastor of St. Agnes' Church, Reading, had a deadly fear of germs and always smelled of disinfectant, witnesses testified today in Middlesex Probate Court, where 14 cousins are contesting his $60,000 will.

Dr. John R. Sennott of Cambridge, who testified that for the priest's severe headaches a powder containing codeine was prescribed, told of the pastor's fear of germs.

"He asked advice several times on how to fight bacteria," said the physician.

George D. Colgan of Lee st., Cambridge, a former Cambridge druggist, testified that Father Brown always smelled of germkiller and that he purchased the disinfectant by the quart every few weeks.

"HOME BREW" PARTY

The druggist said he thought this peculiar in the priest and thought peculiar also Father Brown's wearing his hair long and wearing a sealskin cap.

Colgan admitted having discussed the case with Mrs. Helen L. Mountain, one of the contesting cousins who charge undue influence and unsoundness of mind, but said the discussion was five weeks ago. Asked how he placed the time, Colgan replied:

"It was on a Saturday night and when I left her I went to a home-brew party."

Mrs. Anna M. Smead of Shelburne Falls, proprietor of a roadside inn, testified that in the summers of 1923 and 1925, Father Brown spent a vacation in the inn with Mrs. Mary McKearin of Maple ave., Cambridge, and her adult daughter, Miss Jane McKearin, with Father Brown paying the entire bill for all three with his personal check.

THOUGHT HAIR PECULIAR

The only thing Mrs. Smead thought peculiar about the priest, she said, was his long hair.

'Did you ever see Dr. George Burgess Magrath?" she was asked.

The witness said she never had.

Mrs. Mountain testified that she had known Fr. Brown since about 1893, and he had appeared normal until about 1922. In the period from that year to 1926 he "changed decidedly" Mrs. Mountain declared, becoming careless and slack in his appearance and 'very dreamy.'

"He was not as interested in me as he used to be," the witness said, "and he let his hair grow long. His teeth also needed care."

Heart Attack Fatal to Woman Novelist

Los Angeles, March 22 (AP)—Mrs. Forrestine Hooker, 65, novelist, is dead of a heart attack at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Forrestine Frolick.

Mrs. Hooker was the daughter of the late Charles L. Cooper, cavalry leader during the Indian wars.

CALIFORNIA TO BACK GARNER, SAYS M'ADOO

Washington, March 22 (AP)—William G. McAdoo said after a conference today with Speaker Garner, that while the Texan was not seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, the boom for him was growing and California would send an instructed delegation for him to Chicago.

The former Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, who heads the Garner-pledged slate of delegate candidates in the California primary in May, flew here last night on business and called on Mr. Garner at the Capitol to pay his respects.

"We didn't discuss politics," McAdoo said, "but as I was leaving I expressed to him the opinion that while he was not seeking the nomination California would send an instructed delegation for him just the same."

Discussing existing economic conditions with newspaper men in the Speaker's outer office, McAdoo said:

"I am firmly convinced that we can't build prosperity unless we begin building at the bottom with farm products. We have got to see that the farmer gets a profit and prosperity then will then begin to permeate all classes."

Man in Moon Seen by Astronomers in His 'War Paint'

Mount Wilson Observatory, Cal., March 22 (AP)—Photographers at the Mount Wilson Observatory got a picture of the man in the moon in his war paint today.

Instead of a bright and shining face, the moon's surface presented a dull ruddy hue this morning for three hours or more before sunrise. The occasion was a lunar eclipse. The coloring was due to absorption of the rays of the earth's atmosphere.

Although officials said the phenomena attending eclipses of the moon are not of great astrophysical interest, several photographs were made for research work.

ILLINOIS WETS IN G. O. P. DRIVE

Chicago, March 22 (AP)—An active campaign was started today to elect a block of Illinois delegates to the national Republican convention opposed to prohibition and opposed to any candidate for President who did not accord with its platform.

Although it was regarded as an anti-Hoover movement in some quarters the group announced it was not committed to any candidacy. The candidates submitted the following as their program:

"Put an end to all government activities that compete with private initiative.

"Proceed at once toward the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and, pending that final action, enact such legislation as will permit the manufacture of wine and beer under such regulations as will prevent the return of the open saloon."

CRUSADER HEAD RAPS M'BRIDE

Washington, March 22 (AP)—In reply to F. Scott McBride's assertion that neither political party could afford a repeal or modification plank this year, Rufus S. Lusk of the Crusaders today maintained it was evident both parties must consider prohibition an issue.

"King Canute," he said "had as much chance of rolling back the sea as Dr. McBride and his professional, lay and political prohibitionists have of stopping the determination of American voters to make prohibition the principal issue in the national campaign."

McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, had based his position on the contention that both parties were split equally on prohibition and that neither could deliver its dry section in support of any wet plank.

Police Too Late in Roxbury Robbery

Roxbury Crossing police rushed to a store opposite the Mission Church in Roxbury, yesterday, when they received word that the store was being held up, but the bandits had disappeared.

New Bedford, March 22—Federal officers today raided the "Muscle Shoals" Club here and seized nine kegs of beer and two cases of whiskey.

CAT CRIES SAVE 6 IN FITCHBURG

Fitchburg, March 22—A pet maltese cat gave up its life to save the lives of six persons when fire swept a dwelling house in Pinard ave. today.

Levy Giraud, who occupies the first floor with his wife and three-year-old daughter, was awakened by the meowing of the cat in the cellar. Giraurd got up to investigate and on opening the door was met by a wall of flame and smoke.

He awakened his wife and child, then raced through the smoke and flames to the second floor apartment and aroused Mr. and Mrs. Herman Vigeant and their three-year-old child.

The cat was believed to have died in the cellar where the fire started.

GARDEN OF EDEN HUNTER SAFE

Rio De Janeiro, March 22 (AP)—Col. P. H. Fawcett, British explorer who went into the Brazilian jungle seven years ago to seek "the original Garden of Eden," may be still alive or he is not likely ever to be found, according to whether British or Brazilian authorities are right.

British officials were inclined to believe the story of Stephan Rattin, Swiss trapper, who said he recently came on Col. Fawcett, held captive by Indian tribes.

Several Brazilian authorities, however, questioned the trapper and said they were skeptical of his story. Rattin said he saw Fawcett, now an old man, 500 miles west of Dead Horse Camp, the last outpost of Brazilian civilization, last October. The captive had a long beard and wore skins of animals.

Girl Leaps 4 Stories and Escapes Injury

Wilmington, Del., March 22 (AP)—"Look out folks, I'm coming," said Pegy Henderson, 25, as she tripped merrily off the roof of a four-story building. She hit an electric wire, bounced and landed standing up.

Sing Sing Prisoner Ends Life in Cell

Ossining, N. Y., March 22 (AP)—Louis Ferrara, of Philadelphia, convicted three weeks ago for carrying a gun and sentenced to serve seven years, was found dead in his cell at Sing Sing prison today. He had hanged himself with his belt.

2 Hurt, 2 Missing in Tugboat Blast

New York, March 22 (INS)—Two men were painfully burned and two others were reported missing after an explosion early today aboard the tugboat Stewart in Staten Island Sound.

Mystery of "Face" Remains Unsolved

Springfield, March 22—The mystery of the woman's face found yesterday in the brake-beam of an Albany to Boston train was as deep as ever today, when efforts at identification proved unavailing.

CURLEY FILES 'SLATE' AS VETS OF ALL WARS CHEER ROOSEVELT

tion is at war! We must have material for battles—now!'"

While today's forum was in progress, reports were current of conferences that might take place between James Roosevelt, son of the Governor, and Gov. Ely, leader on the Smith slate, regarding a compromise.

Although the Smith slate has been filed, and Mayor Curley was about to file the Roosevelt slate, the deadline for withdrawals is not until 5 p. m. Friday.

Despite the rain, there was a street crowd listening to the amplifiers from the hall where the Roosevelt forum convenes.

VETERANS ARE SPEAKERS

Mayor Curley opened the meeting by calling attention to Governor Roosevelt's services to the Boston Navy Yard when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, overcoming obstacles and making it possible to build ships here.

He also gave him credit for helping in great degree to have the government take over the Cape Cod canal and for having the big South Boston drydock constructed.

The gavel was turned over to Joseph H. Hanken, past commander, V. F. W. Speakers for the "Veterans' Day" rally included James F. Flynn, G. A. R., David King, Kearsarge Naval Veterans; Edward McNeil, Spanish War Veterans; Brig.-Gen. John H. Dunn, past national commander, V. F. W.; John F. Sutherland, YD veteran, and School Committeeman oJseph J. Hurley.

Hurley said there were Roosevelt candidates in every state except where favorite sons were being put forward, and it was only natural he should have candidates in this state. He attacked Senator Marcus Coolidge, one of the Smith slate, for voting 103 times for McAdoo in 1924 and said Smith's name was being used for state purposes.

Maj. Hines said:

"The service men of Massachusetts, representing all wars, desire at this time to express their sincere appreciation for the courageous, constructive work of Mayor Curley in behalf of a square deal for service men, both in the present emergency and in that of 1922

"Since the close of the war, during the Curley administrations, more than 90 per cent of the men appointed to positions in the city service have been ex-service men.

"Mayor Curley secured enactment of legislation providing an expenditure of more than $2,000,000 for extension of the East Boston tunnel and construction of the present Maverick sq. station with a proviso that preference be given service men.

"In 1930 with a view to safeguarding the welfare of the service men he sought authority for expenditure of $5,000,000 for extension of the subway at Governor sq., with the result that for nearly two years 1500 men have been employed on three shifts, with preference to service men.

"The service men of all America recognize in Franklin D. Roosevelt not only a great leader but the best friend of national defense that this nation has known since the days of Theodore Roosevelt.

"He proved his devotion to the service men of his state in recommending payment of $500,000 to men whom compensation had not been paid.

PROVED HIS COURAGE

"As assistant secretary of the navy, during the period prior to our entry into the war, it was Franklin D Roosevelt's initiative and courage that resulted in scrapping the military cliques and cutting red tape and paving the way for a fighting force.

"He had the courage to speak out when others adopted a policy of silence. He bared the lack of ships and compelled the adoption of a construction program which made possible the transfer of our soldiers overseas when the time for action came.

"It was Franklin D. Roosevelt who gave character and standing to the men wearing the uniform of the navy when he protested against the practice of certain judges in suspending sentences on condition the prisoners would enlist.

"The wages paid the men in the naval service when he became Assistant Secretary were so low that it was difficult to get men to serve, and it was Franklin D. Roosevelt who led the successful movement for higher wages for the entire naval personnel.

"During the war it was his earnest wish, conveyed to President Wilson, that he be permitted to resign and enlist as an ordinary seaman, thus furnishing an incentive to others to do likewise, and only the insistence of the President prevented his doing that very thing.

"He went overseas and few men saw more of the battlefield than did Roosevelt. Into the muck of the trenches and into the very edge of 'No Man's Land' he went visiting the soldiers.

"And history will ultimately record that Franklin D. Roosevelt more than any other man was responsible for beating the U-boats, since it was he, against the protests of the allied government, who put through the program of the American mine-laying craft under his direct control."

Maj. Hines also told how Roosevelt took charge of the Smith campaign in 1924 and fought for his nomination, and how he again fought for Smith in 1928.

An attempt by City Councilor John F. Dowd to force through an order barring Mrs. Helen C. Galvin and Julian D. Rainey, two city employes, from the Roosevelt slate, was branded as "most despicable tactics" in a statement issued by Mayor Curley.

MRS GALVIN ON LEAVE

The Dowd order, which cited the so-called "Burrage ordinance," forbidding city employes to take part in elections, was tabled by the council.

Mrs. Galvin is in the city employment bureau and Rainey is an assistant corporation counsel.

"It is to be regretted that the Burrage ordinance is invoked as a subterfuge for a direct attack upon a leading woman official of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Forresters. Vice High Chief Ranger Mrs. Helen County Galvin, and the formost representative of the Negro race in Massachusetts, Julian D. Rainey, assistant corporation counsel for the City of Boston," the Mayor declared.

"Anticipating that the most despicable tactics would be used by the supporters of Mr. Donahue's slate, leave of absence without pay was granted upon Friday last to Mrs. Galvin, until May 1, and in the case of Mr. Rainey, provision was made to substitute in the event the question was raised.

"In the opinion of the corporation counsel it was never intended that the Burrage ordinance should apply to other than municipal offices and it is unfortunate that the question has been raised, for the reason that one of the delegates upon the opposition slate is a municipal office holder.

SEES ATTACK ON FORESTERS

"The assault upon Mrs. Galvin constitutes in my opinion a direct attack upon the 60,000 members of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, of which organization she is vice high chief ranger, and will unquestionably result in the rallying to her support of the good women and men in the organization who have known her during a life time as a conscientious and honorable citizen of the Commonwealth.

"The Negro race, which has borne with equanimity and cheerfulness every conceivable hardship that might come to an individual, can survive this base, contemptible attack, and it should serve to solidify them in the movement for the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The "sinister influence" shot which the mayor took at Daniel H. Coakley, Smith slate delegate, in his speech inaugurating the open forum, at 333 Washington st., evoked a hot reply from the Brighton man.

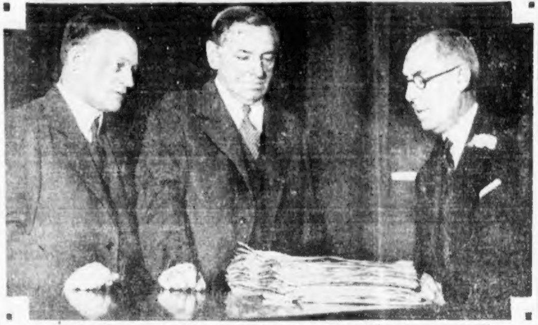
COAKLEY STRIKES BACK

"As to his personal allusions to me in his speech of today," the Coakley statement ran, "they only show that Jimmie hasn't learned anything by experience. He's got the black-jack out again and he again verbally assaults Frank J. Donahue as he physically assaulted him in the Ely fight.

"As I've had frequent occasion to remark—I know Jimmie very well. Very well indeed, I might say, and can predict his every move in advance.

"He's a character assassin de luxe. He's at his old tricks again. To me, every fool word he utters against me is a boost. I'm sorry that such honorable men as Governor Ely, David I. Walsh, Frank J. Donahue and Alfred E. Smith should be the object of his rancor and lying attacks.

"These men are gentlemen who can only deal with Curley at arms length. Politically, they need tongs with which to handle him lest they demean themselves."



DANIEL J. HANLON MAYOR CURLEY SEC. OF STATE COOK

Here's how Mayor Curley, in person, today filed the papers for the Roosevelt slate of delegates to the Democratic national convention at Chicago in June. He is shown escorted by Daniel J. Hanlon of Malden, one of the potential delegates, handing to Secretary of State Frederic Cook the thousands of signed petitions. This act puts the Roosevelt slate formally and officially into the contest held in April. (Staff photo.)

BRITAIN UPSET BY DE VALERA LAND STAND

London, March 22 (AP)—The British Government has received an official communication from the Irish Free State which reveals the "gravity and seriousness" of the situation regarding the Irish land annuities, J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, informed the House of Commons today.

He said the question was too important for him to deal with today but that he would have a statement to make in the House tomorrow.

It was assumed that the communication to which he referred was official notification from President De Valera o fthe Free State that the annuity payments would be discontinued. The next payment is due late in June.

Eamon De Valera, new president of the Irish Free State, has said that he intends to discontinue payment of the land annuities to England.

These annuities are money collected from Irish farmers in repayment of loans made on their behalf to buy out their landlords at the time of the establishment of the Free State.

The total amounts to $15,000,000 a year.

In connection with this feature of the Fianna Fail program in Ireland and also with reference to De Valera's announced intention of abolishing the oath to the British crown, Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, said last week that the British government would regard any move to carry out those innovations "with the gravest concern."

Roosevelt Declared Popular in Maine

New York, March 22 (AP)—James A. Farley, who is directing Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign for the presidential nomination, is back from Maine expressing optimism.

He said every county representative "indicated Governor Roosevelt's nomination would be pleasing to all Democrats in Maine."

TRAPPER TELLS WHERE POLICE MISSED BET

Hopewell, N. J., March 22—A vital opportunity was overlooked to catch the Lindbergh bay kidnaper right at the start of the great manhunt, according to Oscar Bush. The keen-eyed trapper of the Sourland, first layman to be called in by Colonel Lindbergh when his baby was stolen, has demonstrated in previous instalments of his exclusive story of the search that he probably knows more about what actually happened that ill-fated night than anybody else, except the kidnaper himself. He now points out what bloodhounds might have done, if they had been put on the villain's trail.

By Oscar Bush

As I followed the footprint of the kidnaper over the grassy fields that is part of the Lindbergh place, and saw them vanish at the edge of Featherbed Lane, I stands there figuring to myself how it is possible to find out where the baby stealer went from there.

If I had been in charge of the investigation, instead of merely advising the state troopers in their search, it seems to me the first thing I would have done is to bring in a pack of bloodhounds.

For even if the kidnaper took an automobile from somewhere around there, the bloodhounds could have picked up the trail. Even my hunting dogs are pretty hard to put off a scent. I can lose them away out in the mountain and go walking home, certain they will be able to follow me.

TRAIL NEAR HOUSE

A pack of bloodhounds, set on the trail of the kidnapers, where it was plain close to the house that morning, then made to scatter in all directions over the mountain, would like as not have picked the scent up somewhere.

But the troopers tells me they has no bloodhounds, so I set to thinking how to pick up the trail all alone.

Featherbed Lane is a dirt road, and the tracks didn't cross it. They ended in the gravel along the side. So I figures that the kidnapers hiked along the gravel path to where the lane turns into the Wertsville road.

I follows along that way.

TWO DIRECTIONS

There's two directions on the road. If you turn south, you're headed for Hopewell, and pretty soon, when the baby's reported lost, you're running right into the arms of the police, rushing up from Princeton and Trenton. State police headquarters is near Princeton, in a little place called Penns Neck.

Better not turn south then.

If you turn up north on the Wertsville road you're headed for the mountains. No police up there. So I turns up north.

Along a way up the Wertsville road I comes upon a spot where the tracks of a car coming from the mountains has turned straight into a field and parked.

Later on a trooper tells me he's questioned a fellow named Sebastian Lupica, who was driving up the Wertsville Road the evening before and saw a car coming down that turned into the field and stopped. It was a Dodge, he thinks, and there was a ladder in the back of it.

THE WAY OUT

That was about 6 p. m. Lupica says, when it was just beginning to turn dark. There was two men in the car. More than that he did not pay attention.

It doesn't matter how the crime was done, for the car and the kidnaper gets right back on the Wertsville Road, headed north toward the mountains, to avoid the police.

Now where does the Wertsville Road lead?

Well if you follow it straight, it goes to Wertsville, but there you are stuck, with no other good roads to get out again, unless you turn back over the same trail.

Or you can turn into the Neshanic Road at Zion. For Neshanic is away back up in the hills, far from the police, but with good roads leading out when you want to make your getaway. From there you can drive to Easton, Penn., to Summerville, N. J., or to Jersey City, with a quick jump across the water to Staten Island.

SUSPICIOUS GROUP

I've never been as far as any of these, but a glance at a road map shows you how easy it is.

Walking up toward Neshanic, in the path, I feels sure the kidnapers took, I keeps thinking to myself of that crowd of suspicious-looking Italians. I took the state police to question up there near Neshanic earlier that morning.

They comes out of the place and says there's nobody there but a woman in bed asleep, and they laughs at the idea of that being where the kindaper was. But I don't laugh.

For if the Italians are gone, where are they?

They've been around this mountain off and on almost a year, never working. Driving around in a big sedan. Some one tells me they has connections with a speakeasy dive in Jersey City, and another in Brooklyn.

Jersey City? I can't help thinking maybe that's where they've gone.

But before I gets to Neshanic, I sees a lane that turns straight up north, off the road into the mountain wilds. Way back there in the mountain there's a shack, I know.

And there's a fresh track of a car turning off the Neshanic Road and up the lane.

Did the kidnaper's car turn up the lane to a mountain hideway? Oscar Bush will tell you what he thinks about that tomorrow.

SUICIDE IN DEATH SPOT

TRACKS BOMBED IN MINE STRIKE

Athens, O., March 22 (AP)—Railroad trackage on a spur leading into No. 6 mines of the Sunday Creek Coal Company at Millfield was blown up by a dynamite explosion early today.

National Guard observers in the field, where hostilities have been threatened, said several sticks of dynamite were used to wreck the track, which is near a bridge dynamited Sunday.

Meanwhile, other parts of the field remained quiet, although pickets were continually on watch at National Guard observers headquarters at a Nelsonville hotel.

Pickets were keeping track of every movement of the guard officers, and each time a party left to make an inspection of a mine property a group of pickets followed.

Police Slayer Caught

Detroit, March 22 (INS)—Arthur Thomas, 17, negro, was arrested early today in the home of his sister for the killing of a policeman in Atlanta, Ga., last Wednesday.

'OTHER MAN' TO WED DIVORCEE

Bangor, Me., March 22—Out of a romance that died in the divorce court several months ago, a divorced wife and the man named as her suitor climaxed a new romance today by filing marriage intentions.

They are Dorothy Helen Gilbert, 22, formerly Mrs. Elwood W. Millett, beauty prize winner and daughter-in-law of City Treasurer Charles E. Millett, and Clarence L. Day, 39, of the Dayson Bedding Co.

In filing their marriage intentions, both gave 32 Second st. as their address.

During trial of the suit that divorced Elwood W. Millett and the beauty prize winner, Day was alleged by the husband to have used Dorothy as a model in advertising.

A year ago, the prize beauty's former husband was arrested, charged with malicious mischief in the Y. W. C. A. in Bangor.

Day, the new intended of Dorothy, is also divorced.

Prohibition Futile, Says Bishop Rowe

Seattle, March 22 (AP)—Bishop Peter Trimble Rowe, 76, of the Alaska diocese of the Episcopal Church, asserts prohibition is a failure. The bishop has spent 40 years in missionary work in Alaska. He arrived here yesterday.

In Alaska, he said, white men bootleg liquor to the natives and one mission school already has been closed because of heavy drinking among the children.

Iowa Republicans Declare for Hoover

Des Moines, Ia., March 22 (AP)—Iowa Republicans met here today to select their delegates to the party's national convention and pledge their support to President Hoover.

The state will send 25 delegates to the national convention and 98 of the 99 county conventions either instructed delegates to the state gathering or elected Hoover supporters.

U. S. Funds Sought to Sell Export Wheat

Washington March 22 (AP)—Rapid sale of farm board wheat in non-competitive foreign markets through appropriation of new funds for export financing was urged today by the wheat advisory committee.

The committee, composed of representatives of farm co-operatives assisted by the board, opposed the Gore bill, which would impound the remaining 150,000,000 bushels of stabilization wheat.

'THE CRIME THAT COULDN'T HAPPEN' » » The Lindbergh Mystery

By WIN BROOKS

Chapter V.

Unless we find a chisel missing from the tool box of a suspect, there isn't much more we can learn from the tool left behind by the Lindbergh kidnaper.

If we had a certain oil stone or emery wheel or grindstone, we might be able to say, by microscopic comparison, that this chisel was sharpened on this sharpener, but the chances are we could not even approximate a guess.

So much has been printed on the possibility of tracing the tool through the sharpening stone that it may be well to go into some detail on this.

In ballistics an expert like Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, possessing a gun and a discharged bullet, can say whether or not the particular gun fired the particular bullet by the simple process of firing another bullet from the same gun into soap and comparing its resultant markings with the markings on the original bullet.

He can make his decision with certainty because every bullet leaving that particular gun goes through the same motion within the barrel, contacting the same surfaces, and so is identically marked with certain characteristics.

But no two out of any number of persons sharpening a chisel, whether on oilstone or wheel, would go through identically the same motions. The amount of surface of the stone used and the pressure and movement of the chisel in the hands of the sharpener would vary with every individual.

Unless there is a glaring fault characteristic in the stone, which is transferred to the sharpened edge of the tool, not even an expert would dare guess whether this tool was sharpened on this stone.

Of the physical clues remaining there is little significance to be drawn. There is a smudged fingerprint on the chisel, which means nothing except that the chisel was not long enough exposed to the weather to have all trace of fingerprint obliterated.

There is a smudged fingerprint on the glass of the nursery window which may have been left by any member of the Lindbergh household.

There is a faint, muddy footprint on the nursery floor and there are footprints in the sour clay mud under the nursery window where the ladder was found.

What Is Your Theory?

What is your theory of the Lindbergh kidnaping puzzle which has aroused the entire world, and which has baffled the collected police talent of the entire nation? Your theory is as good as anyone's at this time. Send your idea to the Lindbergh Case Editor, the Boston Evening American.

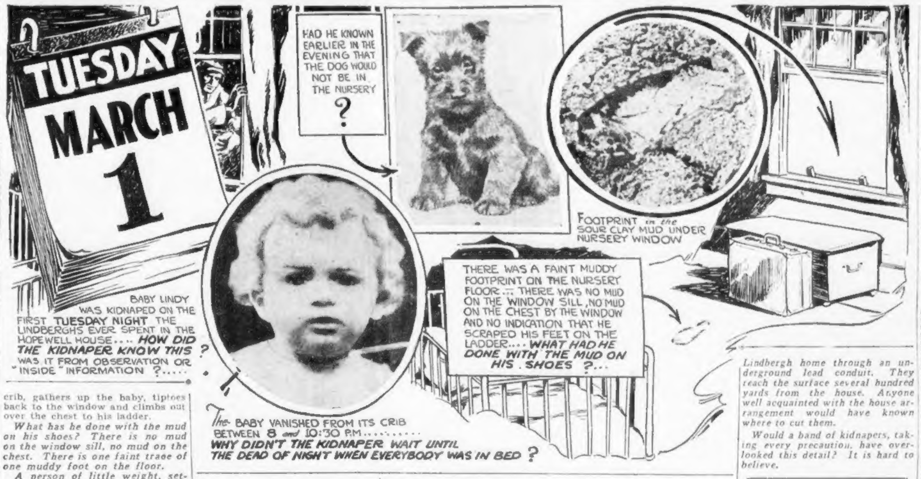
Absence of Mud
That Is One of Marvels of Baffling Case

There is a difference of official opinion as to how many persons made these prints and as to where they lead from the nursery.

Of more significance than the presence of one muddy print on the nursery floor is the absence of other muddy traces in the nursery.

Here is a kidnaper who, presumably, has approached the house from the general direction of muddy Featherbed lane, through brush and sour, clay-mud. He has walked about in the mud under the window. If he hasn't mud on the sides of his shoes, he must at least have mud on the bottom of his shoes.

He climbs a ladder, and there is no indication he scraped his feet on the ladder rungs. Only a small surface of the soles of his feet encountered the rungs. He climbs through the window into the nursery over a suitcase and a small chest, tiptoes (we guess) to the crib, gathers up the baby, tiptoes back to the window and climbs out over the chest to his ladder.



TUESDAY
HAD HE KNOWN EARLIER IN THE EVENING THAT THE DOG WOULD NOT BE IN THE NURSERY ?
FOOTPRINT in the SOUR CLAY MUD UNDER NURSERY WINDOW
BABY LINDY WAS KIDNAPED ON THE FIRST TUESDAY NIGHT THE LINDBERGHS EVER SPENT IN THE HOPEWELL HOUSE.... HOW DID THE KIDNAPER KNOW THIS ? WAS IT FROM OBSERVATION OR "INSIDE" INFORMATION ?.....
THERE WAS A FAINT MUDDY FOOTPRINT ON THE NURSERY FLOOR.... THERE WAS NO MUD ON THE WINDOW SILL, NO MUD ON THE CHEST BY THE WINDOW AND NO INDICATION THAT HE SCRAPED HIS FEET ON THE LADDER.... WHAT HAD HE DONE WITH THE MUD ON HIS SHOES ?...
The BABY VANISHED FROM ITS CRIB BETWEEN 8 and 10:30 P.M.......... WHY DIDN'T THE KIDNAPER WAIT UNTIL THE DEAD OF NIGHT WHEN EVERYBODY WAS IN BED ?

What has he done with the mud on his shoes? There is no mud on the window sill, no mud on the chest. There is one faint trace of one muddy foot on the floor.

A person of little weight, setting muddy feet down lightly, might have been able to tiptoe in that nursery and leave only one faint trace of mud. This is consistent with the light construction of the ladder, so we may reach a theoretical conclusion now that the kidnaper was slight in build, probably short and light.

The sixth physical clue, a note reported left behind by the kidnaper, we will disregard entirely for the present because we are proceeding in theory on the clues acknowledged by police and police have denied knowledge of any note. This does not mean the note does not exist because, as pointed out in the beginning, it is obvious that an investigation entirely separate from police activity is underway.

Now, in discussion of the positive clues we have reached certain theoretical conclusions which may be as distant from the truth as is the earth from the moon, but which are, nevertheless, logical. Let us see what these are:

That the kidnaper may have been mad.

That being mad, his demands may not have been distinguished from crank communications.

That there is danger he may have suffocated the baby.

That he built the ladder, that he knew the location of the nursery and the height of the window from the ground.

That he hurried to finish completion of the ladder.

That he may have transported it in a medium or large sized sedan.

That he knew from observation or inside information the Lindberghs were staying in Hopewell on a Tuesday night, which they had not done before.

That he was an amateur at housebreaking.

That he was of slight physique.

Now before we consider these with relation to possible motive let us determine what circumstances of the kidnaping which do not come under the head of positive, or physical clues, either support or contradict our tentative findings.

Ill Baby Jeopardy
Did Kidnaper Know? Why Was Phone Not Cut?

There are certain circumstances, less tangible than physical clues, which may be of MORE importance.

For instance, the kidnaper has taken a sick baby. We may guess that he either had no knowledge that the baby was sick or that the double jeopardy involved in abduction of a sick child did not concern him. Certainly the danger to both victim and kidnaper is greater if the victim is sick.

Does this support or contradict any of our tentative conclusions?

It is more logical to believe that the kidnapers did not know the baby was sick than to believe he took the chance regardless of the knowledge. The baby had been sick for several days. Then we may say it was from observation, not from "inside information," that the kidnapper knew the family would be in Hopewell Tuesday, for if he had possessed inside information he would have known the baby was sick.

The telephone wires run into the Lindbergh home through an underground lead conduit. They reach the surface several hundred yards from the house. Anyone well acquainted with the house arrangement would have known where to cut them.

Would a band of kidnapers, taking every precaution, have overlooked this detail? It is hard to believe.

Why So Early?
Did Kidnaper Know Dog Was Not in Nursery?

The failure to tamper with the wires seems extremely significant. Certainly an experienced gang would not have overlooked this opportunity for a longer "head start" on pursuers. Here is support of the amateur conclusion.

And is not the hour of the kidnaping—the element of time—one of unusual significance?

The baby vanished from its crib sometime between 8 and 10:30 p. m. What an early hour for invasion of a home for a kidnaping! Even Pascal, the mad abductor of Baby Coughlin, waited until midnight.

Yet this kidnaper, bearing a ladder, approaches the lighted home at such an early hour that none but his child victim is abed and any one of the two men and three women in the household may be roaming the grounds.

Why didn't he wait until the dead of night when everyone was in bed?

Is this evidence of haste again? And if so, what was the cause of haste?

Did the kidnaper know, by prearranged signal, that the members of the household were all within the house and none within the nursery and that the fox terrier, usually in or just outside the nursery, was in the kitchen remote from the nursery, but might later be nearer the nursery?

Had he known, earlier in the evening, that at a certain hour the dog would not be in the nursery, and had he hurried the ladder job on that account?

Or is this evident disregard of danger in the time element just another indication of madness in the kidnaper?

(To be continued tomorrow)

Theories of Readers

The flood of readers' theories on the Lindbergh kidnaping mystery reached a new high water mark yesterday. Here are excerpts from a few of the letters:

THREE MEN

"I think the crime was committed by at least three men, one of whom was a carpenter, and that the baby is in a house within 25 miles of the scene, being cared for by the wife of one of the men. I do not think racketeers are mixed up in this job." —Warren Gammons, Attleboro.

SEARCH ENGLEWOOD

"Let the police suddenly descend upon Englewood and make an intensive search after getting a line upon the friends of the servants of the Lindbergh and Morrow households. I think the plan for the crime originated in Englewood." — John Smith, Somerville.

A JAPANESE

"I think the theory that a Japanese stole the Lindbergh baby is worth investigation."—C. E. M., Boston.

INSIDE JOB

"The answer is either an 'inside job' or Capone. I would free Capone and if he didn't get the baby I'd be sure it was an 'inside job.'" — L. A. Gott, 2 French st., Lynn.

CAPONE

"The Lindbergh baby is the price in exchange for Al Capone's release and there was a contact inside the house." — M. M. C., 49 Thetford ave., Dorchester.

WEALTHY KIDNAPER

"The baby was not stolen by a gangster or a professional kidnaper. In my opinion it was stolen by some rich and influential friend or acquaintance of the Lindberghs. The person is sane, but has an overpowering desire for the baby. When the baby is found, if ever, the identity of the kidnaper will shock the world." Claude Clark, 57 St. Germain st., Back Bay.

DOG AND WINDOW

"My theory is that the person responsible for not allowing the dog in the nursery that one and only night should be further questioned. There is a fuss over a warped blind that wouldn't close, but I have not read a word about failure to lock the window behind that blind."—A. L. DuBeau, 193 Fayerweather st., North Cambridge.

CAPONE AGAIN

"Since Capone is so anxious to recover the baby, it seems probable to me that after all he had a part in this affair. Good luck to you for at least one successful solution."—Ethel Foster, 108 Baxter ave., Quincy.

TRUTH SERUM

"Why not give all the hired help in the Lindbergh household a good shot of truth serum, regardless of whether he or she has had a good name in the past?"—Mrs. Irene Evans, 5 Vinal st., Allston.

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

THIS BEING THE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF the death of Goethe, the Symphony Orchestra celebrated—that is, if one does call it a celebration—the occasion with a special program. (We know of one person whose demise we would celebrate but will very likely not get the chance, as they are in a state of suspended animation, and you never die from that.)

Madelyn Phillips

The Harvard Glee Club sang with the Symphony Orchestra, which delighted our heart. It sort of restores faith in shaken things to feel that this organization still exists in a jazzy world, to promote harmony and good-fellowship.

Liszt's most beautiful music was played to the great enthusiasm of the audience, who were literally hanging to the chandeliers, the hall was so crowded.

Two of the season's debutantes attended and it IS nice to see the younger members of society taking time for cultural pursuits. Madelyn Phillips, who inherits a pretty musical talent from her mother, Mrs. John C. Phillips, was present with Serita Bartlett, from the North Shore.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Sohier Welch Now in Spain

MRS. GEORGE S. WEST WAS ESCORTED BY HER SUB-debutante daughter, Miss Dorothy, who is home from boarding school for the holidays.

Among the vast throngs we glimpsed Mrs. Russell Robb of Concord and Mrs. Albert Bigelow of Brookline, two seasoned devotees of the Symphony.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Sohier Welch (Margaret P. Bowditch) are travelling in Spain for the spring months.

Family Discord

THE SPRING ROBINS ARE whispering, nay, shouting that a divorce is pending in the Hendricks H. Whitman domicile. Everyone remembers the delightful play written and produced by Mrs. Whitman, the beautiful Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, of Chicago, at the Copley Theater last season. She also collaborated in writing several Vincent Club shows and took leading parts in many of them during the last few years. She has been missed from their ranks for sometime to devote herself to the professional field.

Stone (New Haven)
Mrs. Whitman

FOR A YEAR OR MORE SHE has been studying with Prof. Baker of Yale in New Haven and shows promise of becoming a playwright. It looks as though the age-old question of a home or a career is again bobbing into print. Mrs. Whitman's father is an author of prominence and her brother is also very talented in the writing field.

Future Buds

THE HENDRICKS WHITMANS have two daughters, Miss Rose, who will be presented next year we hear, and Miss Nancy, who made her debut last year. She was one of the prettiest girls, frail and blonde.

Aid Hospital

A GROUP OF SOCIETY girls are going around selling tickets to aid the Infants' Hospital. It is all very delightfully mysterious but we do know that a lucky lady will eventually be presented with a chic new creation from one of the smart shops on Newbury st.

A Little Discussion

A LADY WAS RECENTLY having her hair shampooed and got into a discussion with her hairdresser over the meaning of the word . . . lady. The operator said it meant . . . a woman of leisure, which the customer hotly denied. Who would dare admit these days having any leisure? Now how would YOU classify a LADY?

A Difference

ONE OLD DICTIONARY makes her . . . a kneader of dough, but with all the baker's bread on the market the type is dangerously extinct. Another good book defines her as "the feminine correlative of Lord: one who has proprietary authority," which seems to eliminate the impoverished gentility and makes La Nouvelle Riche a lady by act of Congress.

What's the Answer

HOWEVER, A SMALLER dictionary says that a lady is a woman of refined manners, which leads to all kinds of embarrassment because, like Demosthenes, we should hate to take the time to try and find her. Think of it, there may be NO ladies in the future. What shall we call them?

At Russell Home

WE ARE GOING OVER THE bridge this afternoon to a tea at the home of Mrs. Richard M. Russell, in the University City. Many of our friends will gather there to assist the Disabled Ex-Servicemen's exhibition and sale of useful and beautiful articles. The social calendar is very quiet for the rest of the week, it being Holy Week, and we wish we could spend our entire time attending Lenten services in the various churches. If we do not hasten and purchase our new spring chapeau we will not be allowed in the Easter parade. Have you yours?

Bay Staters in Bridal Party

At the marriage of Mr. Arthur Brooks Harlow of New York to Miss Alice Williams Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Williams Kelley of Albany, N. Y., on Saturday, April 2, Mr. James Hale Lowell of Commonwealth ave. will be best man.

Mr. Howard Elliott, who will wed Miss Justine Prince on April 16 in Emmanuel Church, will be one of the ushers, as will Mr. Hurd Hutchins of Beacon st. Mr. John Paterson Duncan, who married Miss Elizabeth Thorndike of Boston several years ago, will be another usher. Mrs. Philip Nash of Groton will be one of the bride's attendants.

The ceremony will take place in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody of Groton and the Rev. C. C. Harriman officiating. Miss Kelley attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Ct.

Mr. Harlow prepared for college at the Groton School and was graduated from Harvard in 1925. He is a nephew of Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Lawrence Hunt of Commonwealth ave.

Social at New Baker Home

The third in the series of house warmings given by the Judge Baker Foundation for members of social agencies and their staffs is being held today, from 4 to 5:30, at their new home, Beacon st.

Mrs. Harold F. Mayer of Winchester is in charge of the tea, assisted by Mrs. Vincent P. Clarke, Mrs. William S. Beggs, Mrs. Frederick E. Ritchie, Mrs. Forest Paman and Mrs. Benjamin Hill.

Mrs. Robert F. Herrick, one of the trustees of the foundation, is providing the tea.

MRS. DUDLEY R. HOWE HOSTESS

Matron Opens Her Home for Benefit

Mrs. Dudley R. Howe of 22 Worthington rd., Brookline, will open her home on Thursday at 4 o'clock for a tea for the volunteer workers of the Children's Cardiac Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital. There are over 18 such volunteers, most of whom are college graduates. Mrs. Howe is a member of the committee for the home care of children with heart disease.

Miss Ida Cannon, head of the social service department of the hospital, will speak. Her subject is to be, "Where Is the Cardiac Child Leading Us?" Miss Edith Terry, social worker of the cardiac department, will also speak, and Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott will talk on "What Part Volunteer Workers Can Play in a Publicity Program."

Assisting at the tea will be the following members of the committee: Mrs. Fritz Talbot, chairman, Mrs. Paul D. White, Mrs. Charles G. Mixter, Mrs. Z. Boylston Adams, Mrs. F. Gorham Brigham, Mrs. Otis Weld Richardson, Mrs. Malcolm B. Stone, Mrs. Max Talbot and Mrs. Merryweather Walker.

Scenic Beauty Meeting Topic

Mr. William A. L. Bazeley, commissioner of conservation; Mr. Arthur L. Shurcliff, Judge Robert Walcott and Mr. Lawrence B. Fletcher will discuss "Practical Ways and Means of Protecting the Scenic and Historical Beauty of Essex County" on Tuesday evening, March 29, at 8 o'clock in Horticultural Hall, Manchester.

Mr. Raymond C. Allen will preside at this discussion, which is under the auspices of the North Shore Horticultural Society, Agassiz Nature Club and North Shore Garden Club. With the discussion there will be shown slides, illustrating the existing beauties of nature and also man's ruthless destructiveness.

This is the first meeting ever held for this purpose and many prominent people in Boston and on the North Shore are taking an active interest in it.

Sponsoring the meeting are Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Roger Warner, Mr. James R. K. Bannister, Mr. Raymond Smith, Mrs. C. L. Craft, Mrs. Gardner M. Lane, Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, Mrs. Henry P. King, Mrs. Henry G. Vaughan and Mrs. W. Endicott Dexter.

Young Artist in Concert

A concert will be given on April 11 at 8:15 o'clock in Symphony hall by some of those interested in the musical success of young artists.

Some of the sponsors for this concert include Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Sarah W. Hallowell, Mr. Edward Ballantine, Miss Alice P. Tapley, Mrs. Mary G. Reed and others.

Marian Anderson, colored contralto, is to be the artist. Miss Anderson is a Philadelphia girl who has shown considerable musical ability, having been selected from 300 contestants to sing with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra during the New York Stadium contests.

Miss Anderson's name has been linked as the feminine member of the great Negro Trinity which includes Paul Robeson and Roland Hayes. Her program in Boston is to include everything from German Lieder to operatic arias and Negro spirituals.

Steel Official to Be Speaker Here

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the U. S. Steel Corporation, will be guest speaker at a members' luncheon in the Boston Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

He will deal with taxation, tariff and present day problems in his talk on "The Importance of Reaffirming Our Faith in Well-Established Principles." President Frederic S. Snyder will preside.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Down Memory Lane!

(In which Samuel Shipman, the playwright, concludes his colorful reminiscences.)

I think a grand fellow of the moving picture industry is Carl Laemmle, Sr. I was with Papa Laemmle in his studio in Hollywood when he had just consummated a terrific deal to make pictures in France involving millions. The lawyers for the French interests were waiting in the office with contracts ready to be signed. When old man Laemmle was just about to put his signature to the legal instruments a 'phone came in that a fourth cousin of his was ill. Laemmle rose from the desk, grabbed his hat and coat and made for the door. Laemmle, Jr., without whose consent nothing goes through, was present. He forestalled his Dad, crying, "For God's sake, Carl, don't move until you sign these contracts!" "What do I care for any contracts when my fourth cousin is sick!" Junior pleaded with him that unless the contracts were signed the lawyers for the other side might change their minds and the Universal would lose an enormous proposition. All Carl, Sr., answered was, "I don't care how much I lose; I'm going to see my sick fourth cousin." Well, grand old Carl saw his sick fourth cousin, but lost the deal.

And here is one on Laemmle, Jr. He paid me seventeen hundred and fifty dollars a week to supervise the script of "East Is West." When I finally read it I thought it was lousy and I told Junior so. Junior looked at me with his sweet, boyish smile: "Shippie, what do you think I'm paying you seventeen hundred and fifty dollars a week for?" "I don't know, Junior; will you tell me?" In a very businesslike way Junior said, "I'm paying you seventeen hundred and fifty to okay my ideas on 'East Is West.' If you're going to roast them you'll pay me seventeen hundred and fifty." I said, "No, Junior, you pay me seventeen hundred and fifty."

It's a wise father who knows his child, and no author knows his play. Every play of mine that was a hit I hated, and every play that I was crazy over flopped. When I saw "The Woman in Room 13" out of town, I thought it was so bad that I instructed Maurice Hyman, my attorney, to enjoin its showing in New York. He differed with me on its merits and kept stalling me on the day of the opening until it was too late to enjoin. The play ran a year in New York.

When "Friendly Enemies" was playing in New York, the flu gripped the city. One night three of the cast were stricken and didn't show up for the performance. The house was jammed to the rafters. I rushed into the dressing room of the late and beloved Louis Mann, who was the star of the play, and said, "It's too bad, Louis, but we'll have to return twenty-two hundred bucks." Louis said, "Not while I'm here." I said, "Three of the seven people are absent. How are you going to give a performance?" Louis said, "I'll play the three other parts." And he did! So perfectly did he mimic the other three actors—two of whom were women—that the audience was enchanted and applauded Louis to the echo. I walked into the dressing room and congratulated him. Louis said, "Well, after this I don't see why we need the rest of the cast; I'll play the whole show." "For heaven's sake, Louis," I said, "are you going to throw seven people out of work?" Louis said, "Well, Shippie, that's the only thing that can stop me." And it did.

When John B. Hymer and I brought the story of "East Is West" to Willie Harris, Jr., little Ming Toy was to be a real Chinese girl. Harris listened to the plot very attentively, then turned to us and said, "Boys, you have one of the prettiest love stories, but there isn't a dollar in it. Any love story," he claimed, "that is to be a popular success, the sweethearts must marry at the finish of the play, and you can't marry a Chinese girl to a white boy." I agreed with Harris and said, "Billy, just wait here while John and I take a walk around the block and try to think out how we can marry a Chinese girl to a white boy." After half an hour's hard thinking, we rushed back with the solution, and Mr. Harris was so sure that "East Is West" would be a success that he insisted on celebrating even before the play was written.

Very few people who know me suspect that for years I earned my living writing laughs for vaudeville. In those days competition was terrifically keen and sketches had to be good. When the war came on I wrote a playlet, with Clara Lipman, called "Exemption." Lewis and Gordon were then the top-notchers in vaudeville, as they are now in the legit, and they produced my acts. "Exemption" was tried out with Pat Rooney. In those days there were no gansters. Even hoofers had to be actors. Maxie Gordon came out to see the sketch at the matinee. After the performance he disappeared. I asked one of the actors what happened to Gordon, and he told me Max thought the playlet was so terrible that he rushed back to New York without waiting to see the evening performance. I was so incensed that I did a Marathon to the Hoboken ferry to catch Maxie and sock him plenty. I got there just when the ferryboat pulled out, and, being a bad swimmer, I couldn't dive after Max. In the ferry house I ran into Lewis, who wanted to know why I wasn't in the theater. I told him I had just missed killing his smart partner because he thought "Exemption" was lousy. "Well, what do you think of the sketch?" "I agree with Max that it's lousy, but he had no right to tell it to me." "If you think the sketch is bad, will you make an outright sale?" "Sure," I said. We agreed on the price and I signed a contract in the ferry house. After Lewis had tucked away the agreement in his pocket he said, "Now, Shippie, I'll tell you what Max really thinks of the sketch: He thinks it one of the best he has seen in a long time, and he rushed to New York to book it for the Palace. And what's more, we're going to shoot two more companies out on the road." I was stunned. "Gee, I'm going to lose a lot of royalties every week for selling it." "Serves you right," said Lewis, "for being so crazy and tempermental. But I'll tell you what I'll do: For the money you're going to lose every week I'm going to send you sedatives and nerve tonics." And he did. Every week I got a fresh supply.

John B. Hymer, with whom I've had some of the biggest successes in the theatre, is a fish-hound. All Summer, from May to September, he spends his time on the lakes of Maine fishing, and when he gets back in October he spends the whole winter in aquariums. And he made a fisherman of me, too. Every Summer I go up to John's camp in Maine to write a play with him, and all I come back with are a lot of hooks in my fingers. Last year I put my foot down on the fish and refused to go out. Every day John sent me a picture of a long string of trout. When I didn't reply, he sent me two pictures a day of his catches. Well, I could no longer resist it and flew out to Maine. This time John got a new idea: He hired an airplane and we set out on a fishing trip, landing on lakes and fishing from the plane. One fine day, on an isolated, inaccessible lake, the engine of the plane went wrong and we couldn't get it started for three weeks. And on top of that, a terrific gale swept our rods and bait into the lake. I said, "Well, John, what are we going to do now?" "Oh, hell," he said, "now we've got to write a play!" And we did.

Margaret Lawrence was the star of "Lawful Larceny." She was married to Munn at that time and was in the Social Register. The play was supposed to be a society comedy-drama, and Margaret kept picking on my violations of social etiquette. So one day I went down to Brentano's, bought three books on etiquette, had them rebound with my name on them, brought them to rehearsal and put them on a chair where Margaret couldn't fail seeing them. She finally examined the books and exclaimed, "Heavens, Shippie, I didn't know you wrote books on etiquette!" After that everything in the play was in good form and in good taste.

Now, where can one find a Memory Lane that isn't strewn with hearts? When a man is successful you'll find a galaxy of ladies back of him, pushing him ahead; when he is a failure the same galaxy stand in front of him, retarding his progress. No woman in the theater can boast that she ever had a key to my apartment. Nor to my vault. I've been very lucky with women. Some of the most lovely and most brilliant women have been interested in me. And I never started writing a play without getting an okay from them. I was not so lucky when I submitted my face to them. Not one of them would okay it. And so I can't boast that in the Arcadia of my Memory Lane any hearts are buried, excepting my own.

Tenebrae Service at Church of Advent

The ancient office of Tenebrae, which is the Matins and Lauds of Maundy Thursday, will be sung tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Church of the Advent. The choir of the church will be augmented by a choir of students from the New England Conservatory of Music under the direction of Wallace Goodrich.

"Imagine—thinking she can get by"

"SHE visited my sister, and I wished then I could give her a hint. She wears her underthings two or three days without a change! Everybody perspires a little—imagine thinking she can get by!"

IN SO MANY OFFICES there are clever girls who do not realize that one thing alone holds them back. Offices are warm, we all perspire, and underthings absorb these perspiration acids and odors. Others notice this offense before you do yourself.

That's why it is vital to put on fresh lingerie each day. More necessary than the daily bath!

And it is so easy! For Lux is made to remove perspiration acids and odors completely, yet it saves colors and fabrics. And it takes only 4 minutes, or less. Play safe—Lux underthings and stockings after every wearing. This protects daintiness—and it actually keeps them new far longer.

Avoid Offending
Underthings absorb perspiration odor—protect daintiness this way:

1 Wash this 4-minute way: one tablespoon of Lux does one day's undies . . . stockings, too! Use lukewarm water—Lux dissolves instantly in it. Squeeze suds through garment, rinse twice.
2 Wash after each wearing, for perspiration acids left in silk fade colors and rot threads.
3 Never rub dainty lingerie with cake soap. Rubbing tends to streak and wear out silk.
4 Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali which weakens threads, fades color. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water alone is safe in Lux.

LUX for underthings
. . . keeps them like new in spite of constant washing

PRETTY HANDS
Gentle Lux leaves hands soft, snow-white. Use it for dishes—it gives beauty care for only 1¢ a day.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

It would be well if every young writer would read the strange book that Ronald de L. Kirkbride has written, "The Private Life of Guy de Maupassant," published by Sears. For as all the world knows, de Maupassant literally sat at the feet of his master, Flaubert.

"For seven years," wrote de Maupassant to a friend. "I wrote without submitting a single manuscript for publication. I wrote verses, I wrote stories, I wrote novelettes, I even wrote an appalling drama. Of all this nothing remains. My master, however, did not let me slacken and often told me that I must work more than I did, and once he informed me that he suspected me of being a bit lazy. When I became discouraged and told him I had no talent for writing, he would say: 'You are wrong, my boy. Talent is long patience. Everything which one desires to express must be considered with sufficient attention, and during a sufficiently long time to discover in it some aspect which no one has yet seen or described. In everything there is still some spot unexplored, because we are accustomed to look at things only with recollections of what others before us have thought of the subject. We are merely contemplating. The smallest object contains something unknown. We must find it. In order to describe a fire that flames and a tree on the plain, we must keep looking at that flame and at that tree until to our eyes they no longer resemble any other tree or any other fire.'

"Often he would make me work over one sentence for more than four hours. And when I had at last corrected it and demanded a few minutes recreation, he would tell me to go out into the street and take a walk. 'When you pass,' he would add, 'a grocer sitting at his shop door, a janitor smoking his pipe, a stand of hackney coaches, show me that grocer and that janitor when you return their attitude, their whole physical appearance, including also their whole moral nature, so that I cannot confound them with any other grocer or any other janitor.'"

No better advice could be pasted over one's desk, and read again and again until it is known by heart.

In similar fashion, bit by bit, through a character biography, Mr. Kirkbride brings to us the great French artist of words, unfolds him for us, until we see him in all his grandeur, in all his sorrow and final madness, as perhaps we have never seen and known him before.

Through Flaubert, de Maupassant met men like Zola, Huysmans, Ceard; and there is a wonderful description of a house-party at Zola's country place, where each writer was forced to tell a tale, in a certain setting. Zola's rendition was so remarkable that de Maupassant said to him, "You ought to write that out immediately." And Zola laughed. "That's already been done," he said.

But engrossed as he was in his work, de Maupassant was engrossed, too, in women. Not one woman, but many. He would not lose his freedom in matrimony. He must experience all that he wrote. Yet it was not until he was after 30 that he published anything; and it is odd to read of his telling of the first story he put down on paper which he thought worthy of publication. It was the famous "Tallow Ball," which made his first fame for him. One of the greatest short stories ever written. One wonders if even he, with his acute perception, knew how fine it was. For it is with great modesty that he mentions it.

He loved his mother. Not as he loved other women, but with a certain idolatry. He appreciated her greatness of soul and spirit; but he would leave her in her serene country retreat, to go back to his amours in Paris and elsewhere.

But his health rapidly failed. His dissipations told upon him, though he still loved rough athletics; loved, too, the art which was likewise his constant mistress. But he was forced to resort, finally, to drugs, to alleviate the pain of the body which he was to know only too well. His eyes began to fail him. He feared blindness, and at one time could not mention his phobia.

Then, on a sudden, he renounced all his vices. He would drink no more, he would no longer take ether; he would abandon the world, bury himself in Africa. He had one bewildering experience with a married woman there, and was frightened forever of such a desperate liason; for the woman's husband almost found him, hidden under the bed; and he shuddered at which might have occurred. For the woman told him later that she would have killed her husband with an axe if he (de Maupassant) had been discovered. This experience has all the elements of one of de Maupassant's stories. It is pieced together out of his letters. There is a tingle in every line of it.

There came the day of his meeting with Madame d'Aramont, who had "shared all men," even as he had "shared all women," with passion approaching, if not equalling, his. It was she, out of revenge for her own violent experiences, who determined to wound him forever. She loved de Maupassant, but fiercely hated his sex. Her revenge was complete. It was through her that he went mad, and finally died at the age of 41, after two years of frightful illness.

This portion of the book is dreadfully real; psycopathic in its description of the approaching insanity of the man. He would see his furniture racing from his rooms, in those hallucinations that engulfed him; and once, when his beloved desk was disappearing from his sight, he flung himself upon it in fear lest it should be lost to him. A torrential chapter, this, shot through with the crimson threads that tangled him and bound him.

"ALL-BRAN LIVES UP TO REPUTATION"

Her Constipation Overcome by This Delicious Cereal

If you are troubled with constipation, read Miss Bundy's enthusiastic letter:

"I would like to congratulate the one who discovered ALL-BRAN. It really does live up to its reputation when it is said to 'relieve constipation.'

"I used to feel poor all the time — just down and out — and after reading an advertisement in a magazine about ALL-BRAN I got a box. It has evermore helped me, and it is not hard at all to eat." — Miss Mary Bundy, Bennettsville, S. C.

Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN brings two things needed to correct common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears the intestines of wastes.

How much safer than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

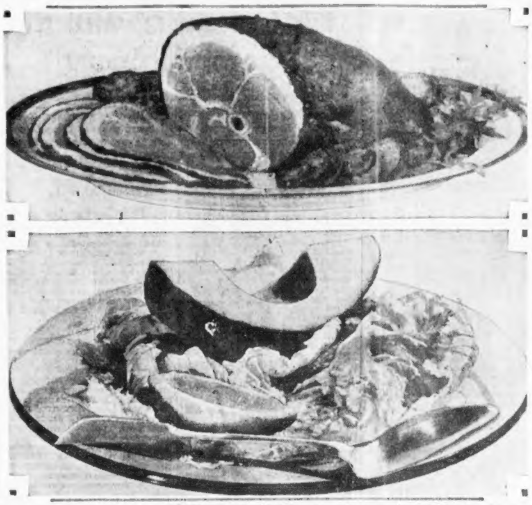
EASTER HAM AND LUSCIOUS SALAD



Hams and shoulders have become the traditional dish for Easter and Martha Lee adds this luscious spring salad as a new delicacy for next Sunday. She will gladly send you the recipes for the baked ham and the colorful Calavo Salad.

Shoulders Are O. K. for Your Easter Feast

Hams and shoulders for Easter are now as well established a custom as the traditional turkey dinner at Thanksgiving. But the smaller families have had their problems in taking care of a whole ham during the Easter season. Many have been forced to buy either the butt or shank ends in order to enjoy a roast or baked ham. Now, however, this problem is solved. The smaller shoulders, especially the extra selected shoulders with the red-checked wrappers, averaging 5½ pounds, are just as delicious in flavor, just as tender, and offer far greater economics than the larger hams.

Shoulders may be served in many delicious ways, both for the Easter feast and in taking care of the "left-overs." Try these "tested" recipes with a carefully selected shoulder at Easter.

EASTER ROAST SHOULDER

Just place shoulder in hot oven, 500 deg. for 20 minutes—then reduce heat to 400 deg. and pour over it 2 cups of orange juice. Bake 22 minutes to the pound. Remove skin, rub with orange marmalade and bread crumbs mixed with beaten egg. Cover with slices of boiled orange dipped in melted butter and sugar—fasten on with cloves. Place a maraschino cherry in the center of each slice. Return to the oven for browning.

A new and easy way to prepare the "left-overs" for serving a few days after the Easter dinner has been suggested by a well-known authority on cooking. All the delicious flavor is brought out by this process.

MOCK DUCK SHOULDER

2 cups bread crumbs
3 cups shoulder water
1 cup celery
2 tbsps. minced onions
6 hard-boiled eggs
4 tbsps. shoulder drippings
2 cups cooked rice
2½ tbsps. salt
½ tbsp. pepper
3 raw eggs
2 cups finely ground cooked shoulder

Cook the bread crumbs in the shoulder water 5 minutes.

Stir the chopped celery and hard-boiled eggs into the bread mixture with the salt, pepper and onion. Add the boiled rice, ground shoulder and shoulder drippings and mix thoroughly. Work in the 3 well-beaten eggs and mold into a duck shape with your hands. Bake in a moderate oven 350 deg. basting frequently with a cup of hot water and a tbsp. of butter in it. The butter in the basting water will give the mock duck a nice brown color.

Many Delicious Ways to Serve Shoulder on Easter Sunday

Make gravy for it by browning 3 tbsps. of flour in the pan and stirring in 1½ cups boiling water. Cook until it thickens and then strain before serving.

SHOULDER TID-BITS

½ cup well-grained crushed pineapple
½ cup cooked minced shoulder
2 tbsps. sugar
1 egg white
8 pieces bread cut in fancy shapes, triangles, oblong or round

Mix the shoulder, cheese, sugar and pineapple. Fold in the egg about 10 minutes. Serve at once. white. Put a rounded tablespoon on each piece of bread. It will take

The salad we're suggesting is calavo on the half-shell, prepared thusly:

Cut the calavo into halves, remove seed and arrange each half on a salad plate. Garnish with lettuce leaves. Connoisseurs prefer lemon juice and salt in place of a salad dressing. If a dressing is used it should be thin and sharp.

Heavy, oily dressings hide the calavo's subtle flavor and melting goodness— and are not recommended for the half-shell.

Book That Solves Laundry Problems

I've still a few copies of that splendid book, "Whiter Clothes—Easier Wash Days"— You'll find it helpful whether you own an electric washer or not, but especially valuable as a text book for washing by electricity.

Just drop a line to Martha Lee.

Russian Artist in Lee School

The homemakers' class of the Martha Lee Cooking School has just discovered that for months past they've had in their midst a real musical genius. Mrs. Eda Blum of 99 Waumbeck st., Roxbury, offered to play a "little number" at the graduation exercises—and we promptly added her name to the program.

The "little number" proved to be the greatest musical treat that has come to us for many moons. Mrs. Blum gave a most artistic interpretation of a Russian Polanaise, a composition of her teacher, Sokolovsky, instructor and conductor of the Russian Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Blum plays with feeling-fire and supreme technique, and held her large audience literally spellbound—and when the Martha Lee Cooking School is speechless, you may be sure something most extraordinary has occurred.

Mrs. Blum spoke gratefully of the scholarships awarded her in Russia which made it possible for her to graduate from the foremost school of music. With unhunted fields for her talents, however, she renounced her musical life for the career of matrimony, and has for months been quietly sitting in a corner of the Martha Lee Cooking Classes, absoring culinary lore.

ROLLS AND REPUTATIONS

GO HAND IN HAND if you serve those new little unbaked biscuits which come in paper cartons all ready to dash into the oven and bake for 10 minutes. The reputation for being "a swell cook" follows automatically. All sorts of good things can be poured over the biscuits—chicken a la king, creamed lobster, or Jap crab, or, for shortcakes, the delicious new frosted fruits — strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, or cherries.

WASTE-FREE RIB roasts are featured at a tempting price. Delicious roasts from fine quality steers, first two ribs only, excess fat trimmed away, meat boned and rolled. Net weight, with 38 per cent waste removed before the roast is weighed. An ordinary untrimmed 7¼ lb. roast weighs only 4½ lbs. in this new frosted meat. List of dealers on request.

SPEAKING OF WASTE—excess flesh and too-plump waists—reminds me I found an excellent rowing machine, exerciser, and reducer, at the lowest price yet, $4.95. Machine has two 40-pound adjustable nickel springs. Platform for standing exercises. Easy rolling seat. Want to be a perfect 34 when the bathing season opens?

FRESH DAILY—an old-fashioned, real Wine Cake—from a century old New England recipe. With lots of wholesome creamery butter and fresh country eggs. Orange or coffee ice or plain. And only 15c! And from the same ovens come the most moistly delicious sponge cake fingers I've ever tasted. All ready to turn into shortcakes with fresh fruit sauce. Or for ice box cakes, or just "as is" to accompany company beverages. Six generous individual cakes—15c. And I couldn't make them half so good myself. Cellophane-wrapped, they keep fresh for days.

EUREKA! I'VE FOUND IT! A dandy bridge prize for $1. Dresden porcelain doll in black and white, green and black, or yellow and black. Stands 12 inches tall and protectingly over a bowl for ashes and four dainty China ash trays. $1—and looks $2.

GINGERBREAD POWDER is another novelty. 25c buys a big package—all it lacks is one cup of hot water. Pour in a pan and after due baking you'll get a nice fluffy loaf of gingerbread, with just no trouble at all.

A THIN 2c STAMP with your complete name and address and this column clipped and checked will bring prompt information of the where and how much, by return mail. More next week, from

A Flurry of Finds

Harvard's Godfrey Chase has his very capable fingers in this year's dish of Hasty Pudding . . . What with his yes-ing and no-ing of business details . . . Beauteous Bettie Conlon and her beautying cohort, Alma Upton, will do the beard-over-hauling and rosy-cheek daubing of the "ladies" every performance of the forthcoming "Pudding On The Ritz" . . . All except the one scheduled for N. Yortown . . . Some big feather to adorn the spring bonnets of Bettie and Alma! . . . And the boys are anticipating, no? . . . Eddie Linsey is "Europa"-ing on April 2 for Continental trekking . . . Steve O'Leary has our permission to continue sweetening our disposition with item contributions, now that he's caught on . . . Looks like those "Merry Widow" rehearsals, a year ago this time for the Lynn Jr. Aid show, developed noticeable pulse-quickenings between Hazel Whyte and Ted Bowers . . . Still wondering if it really was Vera Castle (one of the original Lido "debs") who ringsided at the 400 Club opening Saturday . . . Last time we saw Vera she was red, red headed and sputtering out German a mile a minute, in keeping with her pose of the "Miss Germany" of Willis' International Beauties . . . Is sax-player "Nellie" Dowe's heart really racing the way they say it is? . . . "Sis" Fay never need worry about retaining her friends . . . She's a swell scout . . . Three yells for the way that girl carries on! . . . With her brains and way with her she should cry over Johnny Williams and his drum rolling under Bermuda skies . . .

Help! Help!

M. Trebizon (pen name), just out of M. I. T., sent us a poem . . . We did not use it—for various reasons . . . Mostly because M. Trebison has tried to rhyme "balk" with "smock" and "frock". . . Now he pities us because we didn't look in the dictionary to find "that 'balk' is pronounced 'bawk,' and as such perfectly rhymes with 'frock' and 'smock'". . . We always thought the "o" in the last two words was pronounced like the "o" in "lot" or "odd". . . What say you, English students . . . Here's a lady in distress! . . . Help!

Haven't They Homes?

One morning last week—5 a. m. to be exact—we dropped into the Chalet Club for eggs and coffee with a curiosity to know who'd be wide awake about town at that hour . . . Here's who we found there, under the spell of genial Charlie Forsythe, who was still mastering the ceremonies: Enid Romany and the handsome Biddle chap (of Caperton and Biddle), Sid Silvers and Nancy Kelly, Sydney Mann and Ted Shapiro, Yvette Carpentier and Cliff O'Rourke, Kay and Paul Rush, Nick Lang, Jimmy Kelly, Joe Solomon, Addie Seamon, Ben Goldberg, Alma Sheppard, Ranny Weeks, Phil Malhado, June Martel and Gene Sheldon, Lillian "Helenmorganish" Sennett, Jack Popke and Mickie Alpert . . . Entertainers entertaining each other—vieing, too, in some cases—and all perfectly willing to forego sleep for the privilege . . . Some guy, this Forsythe fellow!

From Our Memo Pad:

Send cards to Antero Querze (who wrapped himself around a tree while auto-ing March 3) at the Newton Hospital . . . Moe Hammilburg taking possession of the N. V. A. Lunch to worry over . . . Architect Roy Olsen back from New York, painting a series of smart screens in his spare moments . . . We just learned the reason why popular Mrs. Samuel Batchelder (Peggy Reed) was not in the recent Vincent Club show—too busy bassinet shopping and lullaby rehearsing for an early recital!

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

If "The Gray Shadow" left you a trifle befuddled at the Copley last evening, do not despair. Better mystery plays have been written—and many more that were worse. This particular affair at the upper Stuart st. playhouse, by strict measure, seemed something like home product. Roger Wheeler, old friend and disciple of the Copley, wrote the mystery—if you can call it that. Mr. Wheeler also has served as stage manager and whilom actor in these regions. He does not, now, assert himself as more than a minor deity—just an author hoping for the best.

Richard Whorf

Whatever stretch of imagination Mr. Wheeler may have allowed himself in "The Gray Shadow," he must have agreed that murder in the drama demands a motif that must be made clear to the simple souls who buy seats. In this respect we must insist that he faltered; he traded good drama essentials for theatrical effects. At any rate you had a first act in sub-darkness, when imaginary spirits lifted scrawny hands from behind a church-yard wall, without much reason, naturally, but with enough pasty color to make an audience squirm. The ghosts, of course, were strictly business like, and in the end you found them only the creation of a playwright set upon the creation of honest horrors, which nobody would, or could, believe.

As goose-flesh entertainment "The Gray Shadow" hardly measured up to the accepted standard of the trade. There were ghosts and undertakers; there were sin-steeped villains who collected insurance from men mysteriously removed for excellent and profitable cause. But there was little excitement. There were few, if any, tense moments in the play. You fairly ached for excitement and there was none. Except for an early promise that an undertaker might drag out a mysterious corpse and embalm it in full view of the audience, there was nothing in "The Gray Shadow" to send chills up and down the spine.

Whether you believed in it or not, there should be a grain of local interest in "The Gray Shadow." Its horrors, as murder and mystery and murder melodrama, came to us straight from Newtonville, where Roger Wheeler hangs up his hat and calls it a day. Mr. Wheeler is a dramatist who will not retreat—a half dozen plays written—and now "The Gray Shadow." If not extraordinary as mystery melodrama, as you may have already suspected, the play gave ample opportunity to the author's old friends. Richard Whorf, for example, returned to the Copley folds and did nothing more than to play a blithering British taxi driver; Enid Romany marked time in a more or less fruitless role of a girl seized and gagged, and Joseph Cotten became a hero with nothing but words to sustain him.

"The Gray Shadow," grim and comic, is honest if plain entertainment. Roger Wheeler is the valiant toiler, Newtonville's only genuine representative in the arts.

BEAUTIFUL JOAN SCORES

Joan Blondell is co-starred with James Cagney in "The Crowd Roars," Warners' new film, which will have a pre-view in Boston next week. "The Crowd Roars" Warners regard as their season's greatest hit.

Revue Star Is Fruit Devotee

Ray Marr, star of the musical comedy revue at the Bowdoin Sq., is a believer in the health value of fruits. She always keeps a crate of oranges in her dressing room and the 25 members of her company are welcome at all times to eat all the oranges they desire, she says.

Miss Marr, knowing that health is essential to stage success, went to a physician. He advised her to eat four oranges a day.

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, March 22—Ricardo Cortez is probably one of the best golfers in town, but he never gets a chance to brag about his game as he lives in a boarding house where there are three actors, a fisherman, a DX radio fan and a guy who takes a cold shower every morning.

The Crack of the Day

George Bancroft and Lowell Sherman were discussing reformers.

"The average reformer is so rushed nowadays," said George, "that he doesn't have time to mind his own business."

"That's right," replied Lowell, "He has all he can do to attend to other people's."

Evelyn Brent's First Film for Columbia Will Be "Criminal Court"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, March 22—Evelyn Brent is returning to Columbia. I thought as much when I heard she was in conference with the Columbia bosses. Columbia is sort of her alma mater, for she made a number of good pictures for them.

Louella O. Parsons

She makes one drama and then I understand there will be others to follow. The first is "Criminal Court," staring Edmund Lowe.

I have often wondered why Betty Brent didn't do more on the screen. She is one of the most finished actresses we have, yet so far as I know she hasn't had a job in months.

Why is it these producers look right over the heads of good talent and bring in strangers?

Stages Comeback

In 1917 before the majority of our present day executives were counting production cost, H. M. Horkheimer was a hot shot in the business. With his brother, E. D. Horkheimer, he produced the Balboa series. There was Ruth Roland, in those days heroine of the "Who Pays" series, Henry King, Luther Reed, Frances Marion and Jeanie MacPherson, all working at the Horkheimer Studio. Mr. Horkheimer is now coming back. He is going to try making pictures alone. He and E. D. (formerly the husband of Jackie Saunders), have sort of parted company. The first picture will be "I Shot My Husband" and, according to the description, it sounds like a "Madame X" drammer. It will be made at the Tec Arts Studio, release to be announced later.

Hollywood Chatter

Madge Evans and Tom Gallery seem greatly interested in each other. Now that Tom is legally free or about to become legally free from Zasu Pitts no one will be surprised to see this develop into a real romance. Zasu and Tom were actually separated five years before they took their troubles into the courts. Miss Evans, I think has as big a future as ny young girl who has come into the movies in the last two years, and that is saying a lot. Richard Dix has come home from a session at the Johns Hopkins Hospital. Under the name of Ernest Brimmer, his real name, Dick sought relief from a bad cold. Rochelle Hudson's latest admirer is six feet four and a cowboy. She met him on location and he is coming to Hollywood to see her. Who knows, maybe the movies will get him. Mary Pickford is going to stay in New York at least another six weeks.

New Cortez Picture

The new club in New York which opened at Pierre's and which was organized in opposition to the Mayfair is getting an interesting play from film people. I am told that Ricardo Cortez walked in there the other night and was at once the center of attraction. He is due back here in a few days to begin work on "Is My Face Red?"

Off to See Play

We may be seeing members of the "Blessed Event" cast out in Hollywood soon. Roy Del Ruth, chosen by Warner Brothers to direct this popular New York play, is off for New York to see the show. Joan Crawford's next director is Harry Beaumont. He has been put on her story, "Promiscuous," and everybody is happy. Irving Cummings makes "Criminal Court" at Columbia and then moves on to Paramount to direct "The Countess of Auburn." Paramount is getting another very good bet. Charles Butterworth, one of my favorite comedians, plays a part in Maurice Chevalier's next, "Love Me Tonight."

Scollay Hit by Karl Dane

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Karl Dane

Karl Dane is a film actor who can act. In the films he has made millions laugh, and then laugh more with each recurring picture he was in. He was always the sterling clown. This week one can see him in person, and it is a distinct pleasure to record the truth that he is even better on stage than in the cinema. Which means that down at the Scollay, where he is the vaudeville headliner, the audiences are not merely called on to applaud a movie favorite, but are impelled to vociferous outbursts by the class of Dane's comedy.

Other acts toe the mark. Karl Faber has a fast line of patter that pleases; Willis and Brown are good Negro comics; Lydia Harris, an excellent "croon shouter." The Bud and Jack Pearson Revue, the Vic Honey Trio, and the Serlany Troupe, are other sterling turns in a very generous bill.

Wrestlers Top Howard Bill

At the Old Howard this week the management is staging "Wrestling Week." Special events are held every afternoon and night. Richard (Bull) Martin is the roughest and toughest man on the mat today. He is open to meet all comers and offers one dollar a minute to any opponent that stays the allotted time of 10 minutes.

The popularity of the Old Howard Stock Burlesquers is attested. The offering this week bears the title "Broadway Echoes," a feast of merriment directed by Ed Ryan. Mike Sacks, Fred Binder and Charles (Boob) Smith have a style of humor that keeps the house in merry mood. Mlle. Verne offers new dance creations. Alice Kennedy, Gypsy Rae Reed, Myra Worth, Gertie Reed and the Francis Sisters are stars.

Vaudeville and talking pictures complete the bill.

TINNEY OPENS NEW LIFE TO MARY NOLAN

(In a fight to come back, Mary Nolan, beautiful featured film actress, writes the story of her life. In the previous chapter she told of her life as an artists' model and her meeting with Frank Tinney, the famous comedian, who was to play a tragic role in her life.)

By MARY NOLAN

Chapter V

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, March 22 — Frank Tinney named me 'Bubbles'—"My Bubbles." Frank stopped me one day, he was wearing a bright brown suit.

"What color is this suit I've got on?" he asked.

"It's brown," I replied.

"You're not as dumb as I thought you were," he laughed. "I think you and I are going to hit it off all right together. How about dinner tonight?"

We went to dinner that night and the next day the girls in the chorus were talking.

I left my heart with Frank in the "Daffodil" troupe and joined the Ziegfeld Follies to be "glorified" as "The American Girl." I was paid $75 a week.

Life showered upon me the things of which I had dreamed. I changed. I became somebody else. I wasn't myself. Life began to spoil me.

There were midnight parties, champagne, caviar. There were beautiful rides—promises, pearls.

The beloved wife of a great motion picture star called on me one day and offered me the role of leading lady opposite her husband. She left for Europe and I was to sign the contract upon her return.

Frank called the motion picture [illegible] on the telephone and cried out.

"She's mine . . . You can't take her away to Hollywood . . . She's going to stay here."

My first chance at pictures went [illegible]

Frank became insanely jealous after he learned I had entertained the thought of going away to find my career alone.

Once in a jealous rage he knocked me to the floor and beat me within an inch of my life.

I crawled from the apartment and notified friends, who came to my rescue. Frank was sitting in a chair, dazed, when I returned to the apartment with my friends.

"I'm going home to my little boy," he kept mumbling. He looked up at me. I was bruised and bleeding.

"What happened to you?" he asked. I tried to tell him, but he couldn't believe what I said.

But we knew in that instant that we were through on Broadway for awhile—if not forever.

(The next chapter of Mary Nolan's life story will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

REASSERTS AIMS OF FASCISTS

Rome, March 22 (AP)—In his annual message to his "black shirts" on the eve of the 13th anniversary of the founding of the Fascist organization, Premier Mussolini today reasserted Fascism's determination to live up to its slogan, "combat."

Despite "economic unrest and severe privations," he said, Italy is calm and "we reaffirm our determination to meet and overcome all obstacles wherever we find them."

The past 13 years, he said, have transformed Italy into a nation which focused the attention of the world and Italians "retain unshaken the spirit of those first days." His message ended with the Fascist battlecry, "A Noi!"

Poincare Himself Denies Death Rumor

Paris, March 22 (INS)—Rumors were circulated throughout Paris today that Raymond Poincare, former premier, had died in his home at Sampigny, in Lorraine.

A Sampigny city official, however, [illegible] Poincare in the garden of his home this morning and that he was in good health.

Father Coughlin, Radio Priest »»» His Works and Messages

Christ's Doctrine Cure for Economic Evils of Today

By ALAN FRAZER

Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American

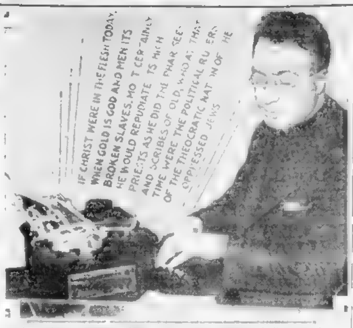
Christ or chaos.

This is Fr. Coughlin's fundamental thought. This is the sum and substance of his teaching. This is the theme of his sermons.

That the world must return to the spirit of Christ. That the attempt to ignore Him has met with failure. That economists, international financiers, materialistic politicians, have been proven incapable by present world conditions. That the admonitions of the Saviour must be heeded. By the nations. By statesmen. By capitalists. By the people.

That eventually, it is Christ or chaos.

To make his teaching effective, he sought first of all to dispel intolerance, then to explain Catholic doctrine and promulgate it, as laid down for things economic by Pope Leo in encyclicals which the Shepherd of the Air quotes time and again.



IF CHRIST WERE IN THE FLESH TODAY, WHEN GOLD IS GOD AND MEN ITS BROKEN SLAVES, MOST CERTAINLY HE WOULD REPUDIATE ITS HIGH PRIESTS AS HE DID THE PHARISEES AND SCRIBES OF OLD, WHO AT THAT TIME WERE THE POLITICAL RULERS OF THE THEOCRATIC NATION OF THE OPPRESSED JEWS

Father Charles E. Coughlin, "Shepherd of the Air," at work on a sermon in the study of the parochial residence at the Shrine of the Little Flower, Royal Oak, Mich.

SPURN RELIGION

There are those who have written to say they have been strongly impressed by his sermons on labor, on international finance, on other economic problems, adding frankly:

"As for the religious stuff—well, that's all right for those who like it."

For them the pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower has an answer which is woven into many of his sermons. That it is Christ he is proclaiming, not economic laws. That it is the whole truth he teaches, not dissevered parts. That he is not economist, but priest.

That, in the final analysis, it is all or nothing. All of Christ's teaching or chaos.

"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

SERMONS SPARE NONE

Fr. Coughlin sets forth the truth as he sees it. Touch what it will. Hit whom it may. Storm what citadels of habit or privilege lie in its path.

"Were Christ to return!" he said in one of his sermons to his millions of radio listeners from one end to the other of North America.

"Were Christ to return! I wonder what would be His reaction to our conditions. I wonder—if the story of Bethlehem, of Nazareth, and of Calvary had been postponed to our present day.

"I wonder, if in this year of 1932 the Divine Master had just kissed His Blessed Mother farewell and had betaken Himself to the desert before entering upon His public life. What would be His reaction?

"Suppose it were our privilege both to be His companion in the wilderness and to accompany Him as He traveled throughout the Palestine of America, what would be our observations?

FRIEND OF POOR

"As the Scriptures tells us, we would discover that He 'began to do and then to teach.'

"As we watch Him kneeling in prayer, thin, hungry and emaciated after His long fast, we know that His mind is reverently thinking of Bethlehem and of Nazareth and of us.

"He remembers how He was born in the cradle of the laboring class. He is not forgetful of their struggle for life, their hardships and their temptations.

"Thus we envision Him as a young man setting forth upon His life's work. We see Him carried by the Tempter to some snow-capped peak of our Rocky Mountains. In panoramic view there is unfolded before His eyes the virgin mines of gold and silver, the flowing fields of ripening grain, the bubbling wastes of precious oil.

SPURNS WEALTH

"But none of these must deter Him from His mission of peace to a distracted world. Shall He be king of these? Or does His mission call Him elsewhere?

"Of a sudden He is transported to another scene. Picture Him as He gazes from the observation tower of the Chrysler Building. Pile on pile are gleaming temples of finance.

"In the distance the incense of smoke rises, curling to the skies from the chimneys of industry. Beyond the Statue of Liberty great ships melt into the horizon as they carry their cargoes of commerce and wealth across the distant seas.

"Shall He smile and consent as the Tempter's hand proffers Him the sceptre of power; as the lying voice bids Him to cast Himself down upon the pavements of Lexington ave.? Down, down from the ideals which He came into this world to establish!

"Oh, no! As in a mirage, He glances into the windows of the sweatshops of the textile industry, where men and girls are laboring 48 hours a week for 16 pitiless dollars. His cheeks grow wet with tears as He beholds the millions of His brothers, some of them working two or three days a week, others of them marshalled into the ever-growing army of the unemployed as, sounding their requiem on the sidewalks of our city streets, they march on and on into the valley of despair.

"The mists gather before Him as the ancient chorus of lamentation rises louder and louder. He is determined, though He be God, not to break the bruised reed of His flock; for they have been sheep without a shepherd.

"Not for all the wealth and the commerce of this world will He forsake them. It is His mission to be the Good Shepherd!

PREACH BROTHERHOOD

"Thus, He mingles with the throngs of the mighty city, flesh of His flesh. He is determined that the blind shall see; the deaf shall hear; that bread shall be fed the hungry.

"His doctrine of brotherhood shall be preached both to prince and peasant. The poor shall have the Gospel preached to them, for sin and injustice must be driven from the face of America.

"I am sure, my friends, that if this were the first year of Christ's public ministry, you would find Him either in Central Park, New York City, or in Grant Park, Chicago, preaching His doctrine of the immortality of the soul, of the kingdom of heaven.

"Not one teaching which He enunciated 1900 years ago would He omit.

Not one promise would He forget.

ASSAIL HYPOCRISY

"In vibrant, manly voice, knowing full well what it would cost Him, He would repeat the words:

"'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer. Woe unto you, blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor.

"'Ye fools and blind, for whether is greater, the gold or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

"'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith.

"'Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell? Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets and wise men and scribes; and some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them ye shall scourge in your synagogues and persecute them from city to city; that upon you may come all the righteous bloodshed upon the earth.

'IMMORAL' CAPITALISM

"'Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.'

"Inflammatory, perhaps, are these words of Jesus Christ. Would to God they would inflame the hearts of those whose only interests are profits and gains, gold and bonds, while they care not what heavy and insupportable burdens they place upon the shoulders of their weaker fellowmen.

"As the great Archbishop of Prague has recently preached: 'We live in an age of egotism and decline. This general decline is the result of immoral capitalism, of unproductive capital, which is being amassed by exploiters and speculators, by individuals and great corporations, be they banks or trusts.

"'Instead of serving progress, this capital becomes the fundamental cause of universal poverty and decadence. I am by no means prejudiced against capital but I insist that capital must fructify labor.

SOVIETS SEE CHANCE

"'We are living in a period of history characterized by violent upheavals such as have not occurred since the great migration of nations which ruinously terminated the Greco-Roman epoch. At that time Christianity was born as in a flood of blood.

"'The conditions that are prerequisite of such sanguinary cataclysms are today present in human society. Thus, it was this consideration which the Soviets recognized with particularly clear vision; and it is to this fulcrum they apply all their energy with the intention of setting in motion the catastrophe which we cannot escape.

"'If those in power and the capitalists fail to recognize the laws of Christianity, the entire world will be engulfed in a sea of fire.'

"If Christ were in the flesh today, when gold is god and men its broken slaves, most certainly He would repudiate its high priests as He did the Pharisees and Scribes of old, who at that time were the political rulers of the theocratic nation of the oppressed Jews."

Policeman's Dog Goes on the Wrong Kind of a Raid

Chicago, March 22 (AP)—Policeman Bruno Paszko felt somewhat embarrassed because "Sherlock," his police dog, went out on a wrong kind of a raid.

Policeman Paszko had just posted a bulletin in the police station of suburban Maywood offering $10 for the dog's recovery, when he received orders to answer a riot call.

"The riot," he reported later, "is over. It was caused by a dog that tried to raid a butcher shop. The butcher got peeved and kicked him out. Then the hound tried to chase the buetcher's customers."

"Whose dog?" asked the sergeant.

Policeman Paszko's face got red. Then he tore down the bulletin.

"I hope," he said, "that Sherlock won't do that again."

THIS IS LIFE

LIFE OF GOETHE ONE OF RARE SERVICE TO MANKIND

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

TODAY IS THE ONE HUNDREDTH anniversary of the death of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, German poet. In spite of the depression in Germany, the event is being generally, even elaborately, remembered. Exercises are taking place at Frankfurt, his birthplace, at Leipsig where he went to college, and particularly at Weimar, the chief town of the little dukedom where he spent his life from the late twenties until his death at the age of 82.

PROF. ROGERS

It was the presence of Goethe at Weimar during a period of over fifty years that made the petty German state one of the centers of European civilization. It was Goethe's contribution to German civilization from Weimar that made it the fitting place for the convention that framed the constitution of the new German republic. Although Goethe was not a republican and had little use for the ideals of the French revolution, his influence was, nevertheless, a civilizing influence that helped eventually to do away with Potsdam and all that Potsdam stood for.

Fame Achieved Early in Life

There have not been many persons in the modern world who may be said to have exercised such world influence that wherever western culture existed their names were known. Voltaire was one such person, an international figure in his influence. Tolstoi was such another in the latter part of the 19th century. In our own day Bernard Shaw is another, his slightest word being listened to not only in England but in America, his first nights occasions of literary moment, his pronouncements of political and social matters received always with interest and controversy if not always with agreement.

Such a person was Goethe in his latter days. Even as a very young man the success of his sentimental novel "The Sorrows of Young Werther" made his name and personality known all over Europe and set a fashion not only in fiction but also in dress. And in his grand old age the pilgrims came to him from every side; even in England, that knew little about Germany and things German, his influence through such men as Coleridge and Carlyle became important. Thackeray as a boy saw him occasionally and George Henry Lewes wrote what is still the best biography of him in English.

He may be said to have been the last of the universal geniuses He was the leader in the movement that attempted to free the literature of young Germany from the rigidity of the classic past. He was lyric poet, novelist, and dramatist. As the trusted servant of the Duke of Weimar he was minister of agriculture, of mines, of highways, of war. He was long director of the ducal theater. He loved to draw and paint and knew a great deal about art. And he was devoted to science, not always with fruitful results but in the spirit of the true scientist.

He studied hard at optics, although his attempts to overset Newton's laws were not successful. He was interested in biology, in the structure of plants and animals. He proved the existence of a bone in the jaw, hitherto unproved, and added one more link in what was to be the long chain of evolutionary theory. He was an evolutionist before Darwin was born. His name might have stood on one of the pylons of Technology, along with those of Newton, Aristotle, Darwin, Pasteur and Galileo, had not the war of 1917 made such a recognition a bit dubious and unsafe

Faust Most Celebrated Work

His chief claim to recognition is, of course, his great two-part philosophic drama of Faust. The first part of the piece everyone is familiar with, since its simple but dramatic fable made it an admirable vehicle for the sugary melodies of Gounod. But the meat of the Faust legend lies in the long and crabbed and difficult second part, written by an old man in whom the intellect had conquered the creative impulses of his youth. Yet it is not without beauty and power.

The Faust of the first part had challenged Mephistopheles, the spirit of Nihilism, to make him happy for once, so that he might cry to the passing moment "Tarry awhile, so fair thou art!" But no indulgence in youth or love or success can wring that cry from him, until in his old age, having devoted years to draining a swamp by engineering works and making it fit for human habitation, he feels the glow of service accomplished and happiness attained, and cries the fatal words.

But Mephistopheles is not allowed to take his soul. Faust is saved by three influences; the spiritual salvation of poetry and art under the symbol of his marriage to Helen of Troy; useful service to mankind; and, chiefly, the "ewig weiblich," the eternal womanly, symbolized by the intercession of the dedeemed penitent Gretchen with the Mother of God. These three save Faust, the sinner.

The life of Goethe is an excellent illustration of the phases the wise man passes through in life. In youth he was wild and revolutionary in both conduct and literary ideals. His ministerial labors for the Duke gave him experience, hard sense and practical judgment. His sojourn in Italy taught him the beauty and wisdom of classic art, the art of "nothing too much" and of "know thyself." In his latter years he withdrew from society and politics and gave himself up to the contemplation of the imponderables, the fundamentals, the moral forces at work in the world. He saw the French Revolution as an orgy of individualism, of anarchy of foolish levelling, the replacing of the unfit by the unfit. He came to put his trust in the orderly organization of society, in the status quo. He saw a world around going to pieces in the ferment of the industrial revolution and of capitalistic nationalism and he was not very happy about it.

That is why Gerhart Hauptmann, the greatest living German poet, comes to us, representing his country, to remind us of the qualities and the influence of this great German, who influenced so greatly our own great Emerson.

SHOULD WOMEN TELL? SHOULD OR NOT, THEY DO!

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

TIME MAKES MONKEYS out of movie titles. Between 1910 and 1915, you could not take ten steps along the street without being asked Should a Wife Forgive? and Can a Father Forget? until Deems Taylor for one got so bewildered that he suggested a film called Ought a Brother-in-Law Give a Damn? Of all these, the prime title was, Should a Woman Tell? and the answer of time annihilates the moral question by the simple fact that women do tell. They tell all. They tell it in fiction and in autobiography, and sometimes they tell it extremely well. "A woman," says Dr. Olga Knopf in her sound and serious work on "The Art of Being a Woman," "has a mental capacity no less than that of a man"; she adds that "the psychological differences are entirely artificial." Certainly if full self-expression is a masculine advantage, the women are catching up.

An Old Lady

Yet of all the recent books women have written about themselves, I have the warmest feeling for one set down by dim candlelight, with a goose-quill, in the city of Hamburg two and a half centuries ago, by the widow of a Jewish merchant, a business woman whose business ministered to, and did not interfere with, her career as a mother. It was not addressed to the tabloids or to a publisher, it seems to have been written because Glueckel of Hameln couldn't suffer her life any longer unless she wrote her memoirs, and it was addressed to the Divine Providence in which she believed.

"Thou knowest well, Almighty God, how I pass my days in trouble and affliction of heart. I was long a woman who stood high in the esteem of her pious husband who was like the apple of his eye. But with his passing, passed away my treasure and my honour, which all my days and years I now lament and bemoan." So she writes with richness of feeling, then proceeds to discuss marriages and dowries business dealings, frauds practiced upon her, successes, honors, a complete life flowing into the pages which are full, also of human beings of action, humor and sympathy. The only things of which she seems to know nothing are the emancipation of women and the pleasures of a nervous breakdown, the first because emancipation happened to come to her and [illegible] the second because she lived in a time when other ills were more popular.

A Mystic's Mistress

It isn't, of course, fair to contrast her record with the Souvenirs of Georgette Leblanc, the story of her life with Maurice Maeterlinck. Yet, here is a passage written by Mme. Leblanc long after she, too had lost her lover, but not by death.

"My present is infinitely rich, so much the more because I have retained from my past that which made it and which is mine forever; namely, my essential right to understand, to live, to suffer, my honesty, my curiosity, and my respect for what I have experienced . . . I remember with emotion my best moments and I touch them again above the flow of life, magnificent human life, great for its follies, its changes, for all that we call good and evil but so destitute in its decrees and in all that moves narrowly within the limits of the ego."

This is literature, compared to the simple life of Glueckel, and the author knows it because she protests against literature in the next sentence. It was, in part, literature which prevented marriage between these high-strung and mystical lovers: and Mme. Leblanc aggrieved as Mrs. Arnold Bennett was aggrieved in her story of life with a writer, can still say that she might have gained materially by a marriage, but not spiritually. Her book is not altogether candid the story of the intrigue which threw her out of Pelleas lacks fulness. And the end reads like one of the more chaotic French novels of amour—the part where the lovers separate in a cloud of misunderstanding.

Miss Janis' Album

For another sharp contrast Elsie Janis has written "So Far, So Good." The title itself would strike a Frenchman as typically American in its optimism and in its satisfaction with life. But no Frenchman could ever understand that a woman and an actress could write the story of her first forty-three years and virtually advertise the fact that she never had a lover. Her book is an album of snapshots, more than an autobiography; it is a record of worries, triumphs, annoyances, pleasures, but except when it deals with the author's mother, it has no emotion in it. It will be popular as Elsie Janis is popular; and Miss Janis is popular in Paris, too.

The last book is written by a man, the son of a great woman, to prove that although she was great, her little self was more important than her great one, that Nelly Terry, the mother of Gordon Craig was a finer figure than Ellen Terry, the actress who played with Irving and the woman who corresponded with Bernard Shaw. Craig is a [illegible] emphatic and interesting writer and his pictures of the theater two generations ago, of Irving and Terry, of the Terry household are all fascinating. But the animus of the book is a defect even if it is avowed. Craig wrote the book because the Shaw-Terry letters were published. He says:

I have read recently a novel in which the author describes a well-known and brilliant woman. It is a contemptible piece of work and I shall not name it. For some reason the writer wishes to prove that this woman, the only character in his book which has any life whatever, is not brilliant, and the way he has chosen is to let his deadly dull characters put it over her in conversation. This is exactly what Craig tries to do with Shaw. He suggests that Ellen Terry was bored by his letters. And then out of the depths of memory he summons the name of a Mr. Marmonnier, an obscure little person who adored Ellen Terry and wrote her a letter every day. And Craig tries to make us believe that not only were these letters more worthy than Shaw's but that Ellen Terry preferred them.

DEER ISLAND LIQUOR IS SEIZED

The cold gray dawn was made more gloomy for undesignated prisoners at Deer Island today through the alertness of the mail officers, who pried open a package containing a pint of good rye and a copy of Louisa Alcott's famous novel, "Little Women."

The same alertness landed in police toils two little women in the flesh—one from Waltham and one from Newton, who were more or less concerned in delivering the pint and the book to the island.

The well planned scheme for mental and physical cheer for one or more of the inmates began with the two little women handing the package to island boatmen for delivery.

It was addressed to the wife of a man who lives outside the prison confines. Ordinarily such a package would remain with the mail officer on the island before despatch.

In that interval officers believe the package would have been diverted to the prisoners. The plan was ruined, however by prompt delivery and when it was opened by the woman addressee she notified Maj. George F. A. Mulcahy, master of the House of Correction.

In the meantime the two little women decided to look the place over and they were picked up by the master as they were making the rounds. Maj. Mulcahy sensed a connection with the title of the book and the appearance of the women, both of whom were short in stature, and quizzed them at length after sending for East Boston police.

They said they were given the package by an acquaintance, a Somerville man, but his address turned out to be fake.

WOMAN VICTOR IN WALTHAM

A writ to compel City Clerk Steele of Waltham to administer to Miss Mary Codyer the oath of office as a member of the Waltham board of assessors was ordered today in Supreme Court by Judge Wait.

In her petition, Miss Codyer, for 11 years clerk and secretary of the board, stated that on January 27 Mayor Duane appointed her a member of the board for three years and that on February 24 the City Council confirmed her appointment when five of the nine members present voted in favor.

President James J. Harold of the council claimed the vote failed of confirmation because it was not a majority of the entire board.

GIRL ASKS RIDE; LEAPS, MAY DIE

A mistaken idea that she was to be harmed may cost the life of a Revere girl, who leaped from an automobile in Chelsea after she "thumbed" a ride.

The girl, Miss Jennie Mastrongelo, 21, of 738 Broadway, Revere, was taken to Chelsea Memorial Hospital suffering a possible fracture of the skull.

Anthony Pr[illegible], 42, of Cottage ave., Winthrop, told police he took the girl into his machine after she asked him if he was going to East Boston. He turned at a corner to take a short cut familiar to him but not by his passenger. When the girl questioned him he assured her it was the shorter way, he said.

With it was[illegible] the girl leaped, he reported.

Police were satisfied with Pe[illegible]'s story and released him.

DEFER ACTION IN AUTO CASE

Indication that some accusation has been made against Atty. David E. Newman of the Old South building, in connection with automobile accident insurance frauds, came today in Supreme Court when the first report of Atty. William H. Hitchcock, appointed to investigate such frauds, came up for action and was postponed until Friday.

When the case was called before Justice Wait and the papers impounded two weeks ago were produced Attorney Newman, who lives in Halifax st., Jamaica Plain, stepped forward and asked a continuance of two weeks "in order that I might get counsel."

Judge Wait, however, was told that Newman had been notified two weeks ago and should have had time to retain counsel. The judge declined the plea for two weeks but said he would continue consideration of the Hitchcock report until Friday.

SHOT FIRED IN CURLEY OFFICE

A revolver shot rang out in Mayor Curley's office at noon. Attaches and reporters on duty at City Hall made a mad dash for the scene. The crowd[illegible] into the office to find a [illegible] in good health and wearing [illegible] and standing by [illegible] a revolver in his hand, was Texas Jack Sullivan of San Antonio.

Mayor Puts Item in Malden Budget for Bootleg Rum

The Malden budget will contain an appropriation for the purchase of bootleg liquor.

Mayor Hastings reached that decision today as a result of a controversy between City Comptroller Clark and Police Commissioner Sweezey over expenditures for liquor by police seeking evidence of dry law violations.

Clark announced he would honor no more such items but Mayor Hastings said he recommended to the comptroller that the liquor expenditures be O. K.'d.

"I will put into the budget an item for funds with which to carry on the necessary police work," the mayor said.

"We may not like to obtain evidence in this way but because the law is so very specific regarding a sale we must provide the means and the spotters, distasteful though it may be."

Both LaFollettes Speak Here April 8

U. S. Senator Robert M. LaFollette and his brother, Gov. Philip F. LaFollette of Wisconsin, will speak on "The LaFollette Policies" in Symphony Hall on the evening of April 8 under the auspices of the Roosevelt Club, it was announced today.

The best seats will be reserved for club members without charge. Membership is open to application by all Massachusetts voters. The rest of the space will be for the public.

Beauty Expert in Jordan's Each Day

Miss Barbara Gould, beauty expert, is making a personal appearance at Jordan Marsh Co. toilet goods department each day this week from 11 a. m. to 4 p. m. Miss Gould, while better known on the Continent and to her radio audiences than to the people of New England, is nevertheless a native of Boston.

The care of the complexion is her chief interest . . . for, as she says, the condition of a woman's skin affects her appearance more than any other one thing.

Marry-Go-Round

MAN ALWAYS WINNER IN BATTLE OF THE SEXES

By HELEN ROWLAND

MAN WILL always be the winner in the battle of the sexes, just as long as there are two women left in the world who can be incited to fight over him.

Now that all women wear war-paint and carry long cigarette-holders, no man can tell a "safe" little vamp from a dangerous marrying-girl. He never knows, when he wakes up mornings, whether he is going to find a marriage certificate under his pillow or a breach-of-promise suit on his hands.

CARRY LONG CIGARETTE HOLDERS

The old-fashioned girl used to threaten to scream when a man kissed her; nowadays, a girl sometimes has to set [illegible] before she can MAKE [illegible] kiss her.

Every man will assure you that he hates "a made-up woman and loathes lipsticks and rouge. But just try to flag him with "a sweet, pale mouth" and a shiny nose

The most difficult thing about marriage, these days, is not to succeed in being happy with your husband, but to succeed in getting anybody to BELIEVE that you are.

Why not "showers" for bridegrooms too? The [illegible] wedding has been a time of glamour, triumph and [illegible] for the bride—and nothing but a torment for the bridegroom. If showers for bridegrooms would make it seem more like a [illegible] and less like a [illegible], perhaps there might be more weddings.

MOST OF A MAN'S HEADACHES
"I'VE—HIC—HAD ENOUGH!"

Don't conclude that a man is in love with you, simply because he runs after you. Wait until he gets so panic-stricken that he tries to run away from you.

Kidneys Vital in Preserving Good Health

Dr. Copeland

TODAY I want to tell you a few facts about the kidneys, facts with which I believe every one should be familiar. We can live without a stomach, or after many yards of the intestine are removed, but if both kidneys are removed death will occur.

Nature provides two kidneys, so that if one kidney becomes diseased the other may take over the necessary work. A diseased kidney can be removed and all will be well, provided the remaining kidney is normal and healthy.

The kidneys serve as filters to catch certain body wastes. [illegible] are formed in the system by [illegible] of definite chemical reactions. These poisons get into the blood and are carried to the [illegible] where they are filtered [illegible] and excreted in the urine. [illegible]

When the kidneys are diseased the mechanism is impaired and poisons accumulate within the system. This disaster may be caused in a variety of ways, but it is most frequently due to an infection. This disorder may be a complication resulting from a simple cold. It may follow tonsillitis, or an infection of the teeth or throat. A boil or abscess on a finger or toe may be sufficient to produce a [illegible] stream infection [illegible] germs to the kidneys and [illegible] an abscess [illegible]

Some persons are more susceptible to kidney disorders than others. [illegible] may be traced to [illegible] of the kidneys [illegible] childhood. It may be the result of an accident or [illegible] or of congenital weakness of the kidneys. Tuberculosis [illegible] of the kidney sometimes [illegible] in an adult who may have [illegible] the disease for many years, yet was unaware of the infection.

Many persons are too careless about the food they eat. Please [illegible] in diet [illegible] to kidney di[illegible] [illegible] foods, excesses of [illegible] alcohol, nicotine [illegible] are injurious to the kidneys. These vital organs are delicate in structure and cannot withstand continued injury and abuse.

I took charge of all this miscellany with the exception of the set of keys, which Colt examined with curiosity. Most of them were not difficult to identify—keys for the ignition and door of an automobile, keys to a safety deposit box, a flat [illegible] the front door of an apartment and larger [illegible] pattern which [illegible] belonged to the [illegible] between his thumb and finger studying the [illegible] pattern of its stock with [illegible] A grim smile flittered over his strong lips and [illegible] he said:

The desk's vast expanse of leather over steel stretched away from the empty chair like a desert.

In the top drawer at the right, there was the same neatness. A drinking glass, a towel, a piece of soap in a box and a supply of clean handkerchiefs. The second drawer was entirely empty. The third was a [illegible] deeper drawer with a false front that would make one believe there were two instead of one. It contained three [illegible] pencil boxes of [illegible] no doubt Christmas presents from grateful patients.

As I made an inventory in my [illegible] [illegible]

Even People in Love May Be Bored at Times

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a problem that I have never seen discussed in your column. I am engaged to be married to a very fine young man and I want to know just how often we are supposed to see each other.

SALLY.

Dear Sally: Someone has said "When in doubt use common sense." Let your woman's intuition tell you what is right. [illegible] the young man may sometimes have obligations in the way of work to do in the evening [illegible] family engagements. Even people in love may become bored [illegible] seeing each other too often.

Now She Regrets It

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some time ago I started to go with a young man who was [illegible] going around with a crowd [illegible] which sometimes influenced him to take too much to drink. I made him understand from the start that I was opposed to anything like that and that any time I heard he had been [illegible] with this particular crowd would mean the end of everything between us. Just before Christmas I heard he had been to a party given by one of the girls in this old crowd and as usual had taken too much to drink. I felt so angry that I thought my love for him had died and I told him so. A week later I called him on the telephone and told him that I had forgiven him and he thanked me. I haven't heard anything from him since then.

I. F.

Dear I. F.: You'll have to admit, my dear, that you were just a bit high handed with this young man. After all, I wonder if you have enough interests in common. Things are [illegible] with the [illegible] parties he [illegible] What are the other things that he [illegible] that you [illegible] him? Because [illegible] in life are not [illegible] it would [illegible] worth while to try to win the young man back.

Kissing

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been working in a law office for nearly a year. I have a good position as secretary to one of the best lawyers in [illegible] I am now faced with the problem of either being a little free [illegible] my boss, who is a married man, or losing my position. Most [illegible] these days don't [illegible] a [illegible] bestow kisses with a married man and I don't want to be narrow or prejudiced along these lines.

SALLY Y.

Dear Sally Lou: This is a [illegible] that will take ingenuity to manage. But I believe a clever girl like yourself can come out with flying colors. If the man has any sense of fair play he will respect you for keeping him at a distance, but if he can't seem to [illegible] I am [illegible] you to look for another job at your earliest convenience.

Gracious Way to Console

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have known a lady, older than I am, for quite some time. Recently she lost her position and I feel as though it would be nice to write and tell her how sorry I am. A friend of mine says it wouldn't be [illegible] I am not wrong [illegible] tell me how I should [illegible] letter?

FRANCES.

Indeed it would be a most gracious thing for you to do to write this friend and tell her how sorry you are that she has had the misfortune of losing her position, and that you hope that very soon she will find something that will be just what she would like to have.

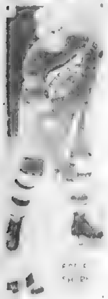
A Bit o' Hockey From a Different Angle

T[illegible] Our Bruins [illegible] W[illegible] Y Am[illegible] will lower the National H[illegible] Boston Gar[illegible] [illegible] all will attend the obsequies. The two sextets are in a desperate battle for the bottom of the river championship. The only reason they are not lower is they have reached the bottom. It's a [illegible], matter, that of the Bruins, once the greatest hockey combination that ever [illegible] finishing up the season [illegible] We [illegible] Bruins [illegible] Everything the Bruins did seemed to be the wrong way around. You've got [illegible] They're either very, very good, or very, very bad. The Bruins of a couple of years ago we always will consider the greatest [illegible] in the annals of hockey. That's one reason why their sudden tran[illegible] is such a mystery.



Did you ever stop to think what a job it really is to develop a winning hockey combination this side of the border? It's a cold, hard business proposition here. Whatever club spirit present is manufactured. Sentiment doesn't enter. For instance, consider the sentiment and romance that undoubtedly helps carry Les Canadiens to the hockey heights. Hockey with Les Canadiens isn't a game. It is an institution. One only needs to visit the dressing room of the Flying Frenchmen in their home rink in Montreal to understand that. "It is a place that is something more than a dressing room," Ford Frick recently penned. "It's a museum, too. A shrine—the shrine of French-Canadian achievement."

The [illegible] The walls are hidden with pictures of players in flame-colored jerseys, photos of the heroes who carried on for Les Canadiens [illegible] earlier days of the [illegible] You look at them and the ghosts of the Old Brigades seem to hover about you. What walls are not hidden with pictures [illegible] sticks [illegible] rack row on row [illegible] Forum's Field [illegible] Every player joining Les Canadiens is given a rack for his sticks and they're never removed. The players come and go, but the sticks remain, mementos of every player who ever wore the flaming [illegible] of the club, which represents the sons of the old voyageurs and Coureur de Bois.

HOWIE MCKENZ

Scattered profusely among the cherished pictures and sticks you will find all kinds of good luck pieces. Hand-carved crucifixes attest the religious faith. The superstitions of the habitants are handed down in backwoods charms, bear claws, elks' teeth, objects carved from moosehorn and made from birch bark, Indian embroideries on doeskin and caribou skin scrolls. You follow the history of Canada as well as the history of hockey, there in the dressing room of Les Canadiens.

And now, folks, do you see how much easier it is to weld together a championship hockey [illegible] on the [illegible] side of the border than it is the [illegible]? History, romance, tradition, [illegible] Some day, perhaps, Boston, too, will have it. But not now. The game is [illegible] We will not have it until more American players are [illegible] The [illegible] New England [illegible] We cannot look [illegible] hockey material, but [illegible] springing up each year. On them will be more [illegible] college games. To them we must turn to get [illegible] make the real home teams you root for from the [illegible] which provide an inspiration and urge that on this [illegible] yet be found.

The [illegible] a championship combination always is rather [illegible] hero worship we [illegible] [illegible] Boston [illegible]

MEDFORD RELAY TEAM OUTRUNS DEPRESSION

BOYS TO PAY OWN WAY TO PENN GAMES

The Medford High relay team refused to be balked by depression or any other obstacle. The sportsmanship that has prevailed at this school in the past was more than exemplified today when the boys decided to accept the invitation of the Penn Relay Committee to compete in the annual Philly meet on April 29 and 30.

It may be that Dad is footing the bill, but nevertheless the boys are going and are to pay their own way. Those making the trip will leave by automobile on April 28 and arrive in time, with good luck, for the games.

Just to add to the troubles of the Medford High Athletic Board, the Field Association, a body that governs the activities on the Medford athletic field, informed the school committee that $8600 will be needed annually for the next 10 years to maintain the arena without any replacements. [illegible] at the end of that time the Medford High Athletic Association [illegible] up to the demands the committee will turn the field over to the school [illegible].

It's about time they whole music to that time-worn controversy of the price of tickets for that Medford-Malden Thanksgiving Day game. It was up before the board again [illegible] and was laid on the table. It seems the public, or those to pay the freight, want the price of tickets to be $1. The committee insist on $2. However, it's a long way to Thanksgiving Day.

Earl Martineau, former backfield [illegible] coach at Purdue, as night was named as assistant to head coach H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, called from Minnesota to take charge of Tiger football last Wednesday. Elton E. (Tad) Wieman, who assisted Crisler at Minnesota, was appointed line coach at Princeton.

The Daily Dozen

—By Myles T. McSweeney—

Five hundred and fifty special[illegible] designed [illegible] by 10 feet houses are being built just outside Los Angeles to accommodate Olympic athletes from 40 countries. The Scandinavians are going to live in their own safety match boxes.

The size of the houses will permit a competitor to change little but his mind without sticking his feet through the windows.

Each house will accommodate two persons, if neither wears heavy underwear.

One prominent Olympic official when asked the reason for the dimensions of the houses, said: "We don't want to leave any room for imported alibis."

All athletes will be subject to a duty of 10 per cent of the truth and rigidly examined for [illegible].

Members of the "40 and 8," the boys who rode in French box cars in the World War, want to know why so much room is being given to the Olympic athletes.

Mel Carr, prominent member of the 40 and 8, says he could find a whole company in a cottage 24 feet by 10. At least in power.

Norwegian sardine packers and New York subway guards will act as traffic cops in the Olympic village.

After the Olympic Games are over the houses will be sold to Hollywood actors as hat boxes.

Now that the Bruins will have no more use for the Garden ice, "Toots" Mondt might stage his wrestling bouts on the ice. So far, the matmen have given exhibitions of every sport in their bouts, except hockey.

A mat bout with the principals on skates would be a big help to the referees who are being assaulted regularly. Bert Potts, for example, could easily elude Jack Washburn by cutting a few fancy figures and jumping into the penalty box.

Grover Cleveland Alexander will pitch again for the House of David nine this season, but he persists in breaking training every couple of days.

COURT REFEREE IN MAT WAR

Wrestling promoters of late are introducing a new hold in the game known as the injunction lock. Charlie Gordon, local promoter, threatens to employ that hold to throw George Linnehan, California grappler, off the mat card at Boston Garden tomorrow night.

Gordon also points to the [illegible] Mondt is [illegible] with Mondt is [illegible] organization. Gordon claims he has a contract which bars [illegible] from wrestling for any other [illegible].

Londos intimated that Washburn should pick a fight with a flock of longshoremen if he is really desirous of getting action. Jim intends to stick to meeting wrestlers according to his own announcement.

Hans Steinke, German Oak, who defeated four men in a battle royal last week, will also appear on the card. He will clash with George Zaharias.

In another tussle George Kotsonaros, Greek heavyweight, will oppose Earl McCready.

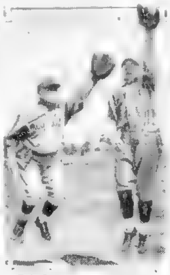
First Division Goal of Ambitious Hose

By JOE CASHMAN

Savannah, Ga., March 22.—"We'll land in the first division" is the surprising slogan of the Red Sox this spring.

It long was [illegible] of how [illegible] cellar. Last season for the first time since 1924 they [illegible].

S. Manager John Collins [illegible]



Bob Quinn Ed Healey

[illegible] set a money [illegible] as the new goal when the gang [illegible] spring.

"Aiming a bit over your head, aren't you?" we asked the pilot after hearing several of the boys talking about finishing in the select circle.

"Not so much over as you probably imagine," Shano replied. "I figure my club is strong enough now to play .500 ball with a fair share of the breaks, and if that percentage doesn't land us among the first four, it won't leave us far behind, that's certain.

Experts All Wrong, Thinks Collins

"But," we argued, "none of the experts or rival managers give you a chance to do any better than last season. The majority, in fact, doubt that you will do as well, claiming you haven't strengthened as much as the clubs that finished below you in '31."

"That's because they haven't been able to find Savannah to look us over," he explained. "What dope they have is based on hearsay and hearsay that is all wet, if it leads to the conclusion that we have not strengthened.

"Why, down in Pensacola last Spring, I didn't have a satisfactory second or third baseman and not a single left-handed pitcher. Now I have Marty McManus, perhaps the best third sacker in the league, two classy second basemen in Dashiell and Olson and two promising southpaws in Weiland and Michaels.

"We beat out the Tigers and White Sox and practically tied the Browns with two big gaps in the infield and a serious mound deficiency.

Strengthening Can Push Sox Ahead

"With those three weak spots bolstered, we ought to easily outdistance the other second division outfits and possibly overtake one of the clubs that finished ahead of us a year back to my way of thinking.

"Still another improvement you can look for is in the management. Last season was my first as a big league boss. I had to waste valuable time learning the ropes. It took me a month or more to get acquainted with my players, to learn what each could do and how each could best be handled. It took me another month to find out what every manager ought to know about the strength and weakness of opposing clubs.

Red Hose Depending on Southpaws

"I'll know all this starting out this year and the Sox should profit some as a result.

"Let one of my southpaws prove a consistent winner and the injury jinx play fair with us, and we'll turn in that .500 performance. Let both southpaws come through, and not more than three clubs will beat us out."

Mr. Boston

"WHAT DO YOU think about our present day wrestlers?" Paul Bowser asked old Marin Plestina, the trust buster himself.

"Paul," replied Plestina, "if I told you the truth a lot of guys who think they can wrestle would start bringing suits for slander against me. Nowadays a guy is lucky to have a suit of clothes and I understand these slander suits aim to make a guy run around in his B. V. D.'s."

"You're among friends, Marin," pressed Bowser. "Tell us what you think about some of these boys who are tackling the [illegible]."

[illegible]

"Sorry, Paul," said Plestina apologetically.

"I'll sue you for the damage to the desk unless you tell me what you think of these boys who are cutting loose in the ring," went on Bowser.

Plestina growled. His face became as dark and ugly as the sky before a thunderstorm breaks.

"I think they're a lot of BUMS," bellowed Plestina. "BUMS, BUMS. I don't care whether you like it or not. That's my honest opinion. They're just a bunch of BUMS, big and conceited, and they don't know how to wrestle.

[illegible]

"I'll make you a proposition," said Paul. "I'll match you with six opponents, and to win you must toss all of them inside of an hour."

[illegible]

"Name the big BUMS," he demanded. "I'll do the rest. And if I don't toss all six of them you can have my end of the purse."

[illegible]

"Nick Elsh of Sweden, Earl Tompkins, Wyoming, Wildcat Jimmy Nelson, Sweden, Pat Flanagan, southern California, John Peddalony, [illegible] and Joe Kopecki, Poland, are the men," said Bowser.

COURAGE PAYS, FRUIT COMPANY PROVES

By B. C. FORBES

THE SPRING TONIC America needs most is courage

A reader having suggested that this column tell the country of the splendid enterprise being exercised by the Standard Fruit & Steamship Company, I asked a friend familiar with the facts to supply them. The [illegible] as an inspiration to other business men [illegible]

"They undoubtedly showed courage in spending nearly $800,000 converting four destroyers into motorships at American shipyards.

"They showed courage recently in buying a large interest in Jamaica, when the Atlantic Fruit Company went out of business.

"They showed courage in developing and increasing a worldwide business with weekly sailings to England and the Continent.

"They showed courage in building up a distribution of bananas of about thirty million stems out of a world distribution of ninety million.

"They own 34 ships with weekly, or more frequent, sailings to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Tampa, Galveston, Mobile, Rotterdam and London, and, of course, New Orleans, and they are growing and buying bananas in Honduras, Nicaragua, Mexico, Panama, Cuba, and Jamaica."

Incidentally [illegible] last year increased their nominal profit for 1930 by [illegible] fold.

Refreshing [illegible] being rewarded [illegible]

Pickup in Advertising

Homer Guck, publisher of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, tells me:

"Our February advertising lineage figures indicate a definite change for the better in Chicago business conditions. They show an increase in Chicago of 126,195 lines, compared with a year ago, and are also higher than in February, 1930. Our January lineage, likewise, increased over the last two years."

With pardonable satisfaction, he adds:

"The most important fact is that sales increases were reported by every advertiser who used our paper exclusively."

Another sign [illegible] that at least some concerns realize the importance of [illegible] and "selling 'em by telling 'em."

Stock "Unsplitting" Beneficial

Several investors write complaining of proposed "unsplitting" of stock split during boom days. They feel that they should not be called upon to give up [illegible] four or five shares for one.

They don't realize that [illegible] the proportion, the percentage of [illegible] continue to own [illegible] own 100 shares worth $[illegible] at only a few [illegible] and many stock owners like to be able to [illegible] holdings.

Likewise, it is better for a corporation to have 1,000,000 shares than 5,000,000 shares, better to have 5,000,000 than 25,000,000. Expense [illegible] Dividend payments are more easily handled [illegible] In some instances [illegible]

In some cases [illegible] for cutting down capital structure. Take Electric Bond & Share, whose plan to exchange one share for [illegible] and to lower the nominal total par value has [illegible]

The company explains that [illegible] be changed, difficulties would [illegible] of continuing preferred stock dividends paid by it and its predecessor company since 1905. When the present company was created in 1929, assets acquired had a market value in excess of one billion dollars; the company put them on its books at $638,892,237, a mark-up from $239,690,410. In effect, this mark-up is now being marked down again.

The legal technicalities which make some such action necessary in order to maintain dividends, are too complicated to be explained in the space here available. But they do exist. Therefore, the proposed reduction is in the interest of stockholders desiring continuance of dividends.

Financial News, Stocks, Bonds and Comment

STATE ST.

Hears:

That there is little reason for rushing into common equities. Business statistics continue drab, and it is fast becoming apparent that something must be done toward putting money in the hands of the average wage earner. With finance in a better position, some organized stimulant is needed to employ available credit in the opinion of many brokers.

Corporate Efficiency

To some students of business economics it is nothing short of remarkable that so many corporations [illegible] show anything earned on their capital shares. [illegible]

Once demand [illegible] enables factories to step up output the profit ratio is so highly geared that confidence would return with a rush. To date this important feature of the American economic picture has been absolutely ignored. More and more bankers are asking if this country could [illegible] stiffen, and perhaps raise the [illegible] price structure through a [illegible] just as England did [illegible] going off the gold standard.

GLASS BILL TO DELAY STOCK INQUIRY

By FRANK H. MELOON

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

BREAK in wheat, with sympathetic weakness in other grains, [illegible] caused unsettlement [illegible] the Administration's plan to [illegible] the House [illegible] plan of getting rid of the Farm Board's wheat and cotton holdings was responsible for the slump. Weakness in Liverpool was a contributing factor.

Further heavy selling broke out in the automobile shares. General Motors and Nash hit new all-time lows. A feature was a sale of 82,000 shares of Kreuger & Toll at $1 a share, equalling its record low established on Saturday.

Continental Can in Support Zone

Resistance displayed by Continental Can around its previous support [illegible] is attracting favorable comment. Some observers regard [illegible] the presence of [illegible] on the part of [illegible] of the [illegible] also refer [illegible] strong factor [illegible] Continental Can's current position is the 6 per cent yield on the $2.50 dividend rate which many interpret as assuring continuance of the payment. The company is favorably situated with regard to raw materials for the next few months despite the prospect of low canning activities.

Tobacco Taxes Lively Subject

Unexpectedly large decrease in February cigarette production has again brought up the subject of taxes in the case of manufacturing enterprises. In this connection it is interesting to call attention to the last annual statement of the American Tobacco Co. Last year it paid $158,000,000 in federal tax [illegible] to the government for every dollar of profit realized from operations. In the face of [illegible] earnings were equivalent to [illegible] a share with net income [illegible] a new [illegible] figure. Obviously taxes were not such a serious [illegible] the manufacturers.

Illinois Central February Showing

[illegible] February statement [illegible] make an exceptionally favorable showing. [illegible] net operating income [illegible] month in excess of [illegible] compared with $1[illegible] earned in the same 1931 period. Such a showing was of course [illegible] greater economies resulting chiefly from the 10 per cent wage reduction much more than increasing traffic. Despite the low prices of its securities, Illinois Central is [illegible]

Bethlehem Steel Preferred's Status

Bethlehem Steel preferred reached another new low record. While it has been reported that some of the selling in this stock recently was due to stop orders being reached, it is learned that the supply which had been causing the lower levels came as a result of the liquidation of an estate. Interests in the company maintain that the stock is well protected in the company's balance sheet and insist that there is no prospect of an early reduction [illegible] in the dividend.

Columbian Carbon Gas Business Good

Although there was a decrease of only about $500,000 in net sales of Columbian Carbon last year, operating expenses increased by $[illegible],000. Part of this expansion in expenses is believed in Wall Street to be due to natural gas pipe-line developments. The natural gas business of the company is in an up trend and should be a factor in this year's showing. However, more importance is attached to the fact that the management has put into effect various economies, which will be advantageous in the showing of 1932 results, in the opinion of the leading officials.

HOWARD URGES AID FOR TRADE

Washington, March 22 (AP).—A wide [illegible] of the world's [illegible] to help silver was urged today before a House committee by [illegible] of the [illegible] Export Corporation.

Howard, appearing before the committee [illegible] to improve the status [illegible] would be treating the effect rather than the cause.

He said there were many things that could be done to stimulate business, increase the demand for silver and raise its price but that an effort to help silver alone would have no lasting benefit.

UNION PACIFIC SHOWS GAIN

New York, March 22 (AP).—The Union Pacific Railroad statement for February shows a moderate increase in net operating income in spite of a decrease of nearly $[illegible],000 in gross revenues. Net operating income was $822,595 compared with $657,957 last year.

This is the second February statement to make a favorable comparison with the same month last year, Chesapeake & Ohio having previously reported a substantial increase in net operating income. In both cases the gains reflect operating economies, including the 10 per cent wage cut.

Granite City Steel Report Is Issued

Pamphlet report of Granite City Steel Company for 1931 shows net profit of $332,319 after depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equivalent to $1.28 a share on 260,347 no-par shares of capital stock outstanding at close of year, excluding 32,000 shares held in treasury. This compares with net profit in 1930 of $700,715, equal to $2.59 a share on 270,847 shares, excluding 21,500 shares in treasury.

Current assets as of December 31 last, including $2,538,061 cash, amounted to $4,082,999 and current liabilities were $[illegible],408. This compares with cash of $[illegible],331,598 [illegible] current assets of $[illegible] and current liabilities of $461,1[illegible] at close of preceding year.

STOCKS LOWER ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Stocks were worked to lower levels in late dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange today with changes ranging from fractions to 3 points or more. American Telephone dropped over 3 points. Boston Elevated eased a fraction while fractional gain for General Electric was wiped out.

Edison Electric moved against the general trend and registered a gain of a point. New England Telephone was unchanged from its previous close for the greater part of the session. S. D. Warren was at a new low for the year on a point recession. General Capital was down 2.

Fractional losses were shown for Anaconda, Gillette, Nash, New Haven, Pennsylvania and United Shoe. Bigelow Sanford was slightly higher and Kreuger & Toll was at a new low.

Waltham Watch issues long inactive continued so today. The balance sheet of Waltham Watch Co. as of Dec. 31, 1931, provides interesting comparison with the latest market quotations of the company's outstanding securities. Cash on hand of $2,201,545 was far in excess of the aggregate market value of the first mortgage 6 per cent bonds, the 7 per cent prior preference stock, 6 per cent preferred stock and class B stock. Because the class A shares are not traded in, no quotations are available.

At current asked price of 50, the first mortgage bonds are worth $767,000; at their latest actual sale prices of 25, 12 and 5, respectively, the prior preference, preferred and class B shares have market valuations of $[illegible], $383,148 and $216,015, respectively, or a total share valuation of $891,[illegible] and a valuation of bonds and shares, excluding the [illegible] class A shares, of $1,6[illegible] or $[illegible] less than cash holdings.

Baltimore & Ohio Asks $55,000,000 Loan

Washington, March 22.—Baltimore & Ohio has asked Interstate Commerce Commission authorization of a three-year loan of $55,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which would be secured by pledges of its refunding and general mortgage bonds.

Purposes of the loan include funds to meet interest, accounts [illegible] of properties, to pay equipment trust obligations, taxes, [illegible] and provide for improvements, additions and betterments.

SPECTATOR

Says:

Sentiment is somewhat better, largely due to the reported Washington news on taxes, which would mean an early passage of the revenue bill to balance the budget. The market looks somewhat higher, but there is little incentive yet to do much on the long side.

Pool Encouragement

Pools have been encouraged by the resistance the market has been showing in the last few days and some of them have started working again. One piece of good news is that Ford was understood to have gone into quantity production. He was reported to have placed some good sized orders for steel, with National Steel getting a large part of the business . . . This is what the business community has been waiting for and should stir things up a bit.

With the coal business situation being straightened out, perhaps the railroads will spend some money now; which also would be a big help . . . Sharp increase in coal loadings during the cold snap two weeks ago will be reflected in tomorrow's loadings report, which is expected to show a gain over the previous week . . .

Here and There

There is a sharp difference of opinion on American Can, with some going so far as to say the stock will eventually be crossed by Continental Can . . . It is curious then that there is understood to be a big pool with banking assent in the stock and that Europeans have been showing a partiality for it in the last week or so . . . Revelation that Consolidated Gas' bank loans are down to only $9,000,000 should still doubts about maintenance of the $4 dividend.

Sentiment on the rails is showing a little improvement, even among those who are sour on the market.

STOCKHOLDERS OF UTILITY U

As of Dec. 31, 1931, Eastern Utilities Associates stock was held by 8,15[illegible] stockholders, of whom 627[illegible] were in Massachusetts, compared with 80[illegible] and 6120 respectively, at the close of 1930.

Amount of stock held in Massachusetts totaled 512,9[illegible] common shares out of 6[illegible] shares outstanding and 60[illegible] shares of convertible preferred of the outstanding 7[illegible] shares. At the close of 1930 a total of 52[illegible] common and [illegible] of the preferred shares were held in the state.

Gimbel Preferred Dividend Omitted

New York, March 22 (AP).—Gimbel Bros., Inc., has deferred payment of the quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock due at this time, the company announced today. Bernard Gimbel, president of the company, issued the following statement:

"The company has not borrowed any money from the banks during the year. It has no bank loans and is in a strong cash position. Cash on hand Jan. 31 was in excess of $6,000,000.

"Nevertheless, in view of present conditions, directors considered it to the best interest of the corporation to defer payment of the May 1 dividend on the preferred stock."

STOCK PRICES BACK AND FILL IN WALL ST.

New York, March 22—Prices of import shares backed and filled in dull trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Leaders firmed after an irregular start, then drifted off.

Pressure on American Telephone, which soon slipped more than 3 points, was largely responsible for unsettlement. There was little in the news to influence the course of trading, the financial community still looking hopefully to Washington for settlement of the tax battle.

METALS SHOW MIXED

Prices movements were mixed in the metal shares today, as Anaconda went to a new bear market low and Kennecott equalled its old low. American Smelting at the same time worked fractionally higher.

Leading issues followed Telephone downward. Allied Chemical and U. S. Steel lost about a point each, and American Can was over a point lower. Expectation that the Electric Bond & Share recapitalization plan would be approved today steadied the utilities, where price changes were small.

Some selling came into the rails following Northern Pacific's poor February earnings statement and uncertainty over maintenance of the road's $3 dividend. Atchison reported a large loss in January against a profit in the same 1931 month, and Norfolk & Western showed a sharp reduction in earnings for the first 2 months of this year.

Neither bonds nor commodities provided stimulating influences. Bonds were generally steady with the foreign section easier. Wheat and cotton was easy. Liberty Fourth 4¼s were in new high ground for 1932 at 101, up 8-32, leading a general advance in United States government issues. The rest of the bond list was irregular.

FEDERAL HOLDINGS UP

Consolidated statement of weekly reporting reserve member banks showed an increase of $312,000,000 in Government security holdings of member banks. This was attributed to the March 13 financing of the treasury. Decreases of $48,000,000 in loans, $27,000,000 in time deposits and $69,000,000 in borrowings from federal reserve banks were also recorded.

[illegible] pound sterling cables [illegible]oted ⅛ cent lower at $3.64¾ [illegible] opening, a minor fluctuation [illegible]dering the sharpness of the [illegible] advance. London reported [illegible]come tax collections for the [illegible]year to end next March 31 already passed the £270,000,000 [illegible]k originally set by Chancellor [illegible]owden as the goal when the Government adopted its higher tax [illegible]ates.

Increased operations in the boot [illegible]nd shoe factories and in the [illegible]utomobile industry reported in January were maintained in February, the U. S. Employment Service announced today.

In addition, there was a further expansion in certain of the automobile plants which resulted in the recalling of many men who had been on furlough.

While operations generally in the iron and steel industry remained on a greatly curtailed basis, a slight improvement occurred in a few of these centers, it was stated. There was also an increase in the number of coal miners employed both in the anthracite and bituminous fields, but many miners were still idle.

Several of the shipbuilding yards along the Atlantic coast engaged additional mechanics, the review stated.

"Gas" and Alcohol Used in Mixture

Washington, March 22 — Italy hopes to increase alcohol consumption by mixing it with gasoline, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner I. H. Taylor, Milan. A ministerial decree provides that every importer of gasoline must secure from a local producer or importer of alcohol 428 liters (116 gallons) of water-free spirits for each hundred quintals (100 quintals of gasoline equivalent to 3170 gallons) and must mix these so that a certain portion of their finished products to be offered to the public will comprise 20 per cent alcohol and 80 per cent benzine.

Westinghouse Gain for Quarter Seen

New York, March 22—Wall Street hears that Westinghouse Electric will show a gain for the first quarter of 1932 over figures for the like period of 1931.

Westinghouse, wherever possible, is rotating employment among a larger number of workers than would be needed if full-time jobs were given all those working. This naturally prevents the fullest operating efficiency, but by this method the company has kept on its payroll 5600 employes who otherwise probably would be unemployed.

Employment Gain Noted in Detroit

Detroit, March 22—March employment is showing a gain over February's, according to the Detroit Board of Commerce. The preliminary index for March 15 is 70.8, against 68.6 on February 29 and 69.4 on February 15. The index on March 15, 1931, was 82.5.

ANOTHER DECLINE

D. M., Boston—I shall be grateful for information on Pullman, which sells around 24. Would a purchase for investment be a good move now? After the World War the stock dropped considerably, but sold away up prior to the stock market crash. Do you not think it will advance again in time?

Ans.—What prices Pullman may command later on could not be determined now. It is speculative. The present company and its predecessor had a good record, but earnings during the past few years have shown a tendency to decline because of low revenues from car service division. No improvement is looked for pending expansion of railroad traffic and earnings. For year ended December 31, 1931, the company reported a profit after taxes of $3,009,425, contrasted with $4,936,860 in 1930, which in turn compared with net income of $17,679,000, or $5.24 a share, in 1929. Current annual $3 dividend was established November 16, 1931, as a reduction from $4 paid from last quarter of 1927. Since organization of the present company in 1927, annual earnings showed an average of about $4.50 a share up to and including 1930.

Drug Chain Profits Total $1,845,739

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., one of the country's largest manufacturers and distributors of drug and allied products, in its pamphlet report just mailed to stockholders, shows combined net sales of $119,967,384 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1931, a decrease of $14,898,055 or 11.5 per cent compared with 1930.

After deducting all selling and general expenses, depreciation, fixed charges and federal taxes, net profit totaled $1,845,739 available for the common stock against $2,629,196 reported on a comparable basis for 1930.

The net profit for 1931 was equal to 1.17 times the preference stock dividend, and after deducting such dividends the balance equalled 24 cents a share earned on the 1,082,555 shares of common stock issued against 94 cents a share in 1930. Net earnings before fixed charges totaled $3,260,683, equal to 2.81 times the annual interest on the outstanding debentures.

Vienna Workers' Bank Pays 12 P. C.

Vienna, March 22 (AP)—The Workers' Bank here declared a dividend of 12 per cent today, announcing its earnings for the past year were 120,000.

Central Rail Order Planned

New York, March 22 (AP)—New York Central Railroad announced today that it will soon place orders for 30,000 tons of rails. The initial replacement program contemplates the laying of 50,000 tons, of which the road has on hand 20,000 tons. This is the smallest rail allotment for the road in many years.

$7 to Be Paid on Bonds

New York, March 22 (AP)—The Bank of Manhattan Trust Company, fiscal agent for the Department of Antioquia 7 per cent bonds, due 1957, first, second and third series, announces that it will distribute $7 per coupon on account of coupons maturing April 1, 1932.

Penn. Stockholders at Record

The number of Pennsylvania Railroad stockholders on March 1 reached 248,010, the highest figure in the history of the company.

Pennsylvania Railroad announces that, effective April 1, a reduction of 10 per cent will be made in all pensions, except incases where decrease would result in payment of less than $50 per month.

Mengel Co. Seeks Stock Change

New York Stock Exchange has received notice from the Mengel Company of proposed change in authorized common stock to 400,000 shares, par value $1 a share, from 400,000 shares of no par value, each present share to be exchanged for one new share; and reduction in capital represented by outstanding common stock to $1 from $25 a shrae.

Seek Higher Sugar Tariff

Appealing to organized business for aid in a campaign for a higher refined sugar tariff, three refining companies stated that two of the six refineries in New York territory are completely shut down and that the others are seriously curtailed by an increasing flood of refined sugar pouring into the United States from Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. Appeal is signed by Chairman Babst of American Sugar Refining Company, President Post of the National Sugar Refining Company and C. K. Woodbridge of Arbuckle Brothers.

Normal Yearly Investment Set at $7,200,000,000

New York, March 22 (AP)—After its Belshazzar feast of 1929, the investment market has gone on a diet which some bankers believe is gradually bringing a cure.

The diet, these bankers say, has been little short of a fast. Nevertheless, they hold it has been necessary. The only time-worn cure for an over-glut of too many bond and stock issues, they say, is extreme abstinence—for a brief period, anyway.

One leading authority who in 1928 tried to get his brothers to reduce the enticing meal of juicy new capital issues as a means of preserving the public appetite for future meals, says the fast is gradually winning the battle.

This banker set $7,200,000,000 annually as a figure representative of the normal appetite of American investors for bonds and stocks which they could satisfy without overburdening themselves. He decided upon this figure after a study covering the five-year period 1923-1928 inclusive.

The sale of bonds and stocks of all kinds except United States government obligations during this interval averaged $7,200,000,000 a year—a meal that was digested without difficulty.

In 1928, however, the annual meal began to take on the size of a gorging. Bond and stock issues, exclusive of United States government bonds, totaled $10,000,000,000.

In 1929, temperance left the feast room entirely. In that year, the market was "fed" $11,592,000,000 of new issues—or $4,392,000,000 over the accepted normal figure.

In 1930, moderation began with a total sale of $7,677,000,000 of securities, and in 1931 the investment market began feeding on a sandwich and a glass of milk. The total that year was only $4,015,000,000, or $2,185,000,000 under the theoretical normal.

In the first two months of 1932, new capital issues have aggregated $292,000,000 or $908,000,000 less than might normally be expected. On an annual basis, this would be equivalent to $1,622,000,000 for the year 1932, or $5,538,000,000 less than normal.

MOHAIR SALE IS DEFENDED

In confirming sale of more than 5,000,000 pounds of mohair by the National Wool Marketing Corporation, Judge L. W. Elliott of that organization said this mohair was sold to more than one mill and not solely to Alexander Smith Sons Co., carpet manufacturers, as reported. He declined to reveal the selling price, which was rumored to be around 8 cents a pound.

Concerning trade reports that carpet wool dealers are indignant at this "ruinous competition" on the part of this government agency, and fear it will break the market for carpet wools, Judge Elliott said that the purpose of the sale was naturally to lift the surplus of mohair and put it to use, it has not heretofore served.

"Under the fierce conditions of the times," he added, "a dealer is not justified in objecting to a commodity grown in the United States being consumed in competition with a commodity that is imported. To make this sale of mohair I naturally had to compete with the imported carpet wools."

Judge Elliott stated the corporation now has between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 pounds of mohair on hand.

Atlas Stockholders to Meet April 22

A special meeting of stockholders of Atlas Stores Corp. has been called for April 22 to vote on change in name to Davega Stores Corp. and to change common from shares of no-par to shares of $5 par and to retire all common stock now in treasury or heretofore acquired or which shall have been acquired up to the date of the meeting.

Company has reacquired and retired the entire issue of 50,000 shares of $3 common convertible preferred stock heretofore outstanding and now has no preferred stock, bonds or bank loans. Company's capital is represented by 259,800 no-par common shares outstanding and following approval of the recapitalization there will be that number of new $5 par common shares outstanding.

6 N. Y. Banks Revert to Old Policy

New York, March 22—Six Manhattan savings banks—Bowery Savings Bank, Central Savings Bank, Dry Dock Savings Institution, Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, Harlem Savings Bank and Union Dime Savings Bank,—announce discontinuance on April 1 of practice of paying interest on deposits from day of deposit to day of withdrawal. Banks will revert to earlier practice of paying interest from day of deposit to end of quarter. With new rule in effect for these six banks, there will be 25 out of 27 savings banks in Manhattan allowing interest from day of deposit to end of quarter. Thirty-seven banks in greater New York follow this procedure.

Utilities General Holders to Vote

Stockholders of the American Utilities & General Corp. will vote on April 15 on a plan of reorganization involving the sale of assets and the assumption of liabilities by a new company. Holders of the preferred stock will receive shares in the new company on the basis of two new shares for each share held. Holders of the Class "A" and "B" common stocks will receive warrants to purchase new stock at $1.50 a share.

City Ice to Hold Annual Meeting

Cleveland, March 22—Stockholders of City Ice & Fuel Co., at special meeting April 7, will vote on amendment to articles of incorporation, reading as follows:

"Subject to all applicable provisions of law, said corporation may at any time and from time to time when authorized by board of directors, purchase its common shares upon such terms as the board shall deem proper.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

As a pleasant relief from all the world news of war and problems we turn to the Jewett City (Conn.) Press, which publishes the following items from its correspondent, Mrs. William Bitgood in East Voluntown:

Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood's nephew, Joseph Bitgood, spent Tuesday with them. They had an old-fashioned talk.

Mrs. Bitgood heard yesterday that her sister that lives on Sterling Hill wasn't so well. She has a hardening in her head.

The young man that stays with Jefferson Barber came down to Mr. Bitgood's and made some paths so he could get out and do his chores.

An airplane went over Eastern Voluntown Sunday evening about 7 o'clock. Mrs. William Bitgood saw it.

Elisha Bitgood and daughter of Hope Valley visited with Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood Sunday.

Mrs. Bitgood thanks Mrs. Grace Gilbert, of Jewett City, for the nice present she sent her.

Mrs. Bitgood isn't feeling very good. Hasn't been feeling good for quite a while. She gets quite a few invitations to go out, but does not feel able to go.

Lee Remington called on Mr. and Mrs. Bitgood Sunday. He and Mr. Bitgood visited the cemetery. He took him over there and then took him back again.

GARNER'S LIFE BY RADIO

House Speaker Eulogized Tonight

By N. F. T.

Accomplishments, statesmanship and character of John N. Garner, Texas Congressman and Speaker of the House of Representatives, furnishes a colorful subject for the "Great Personalities" program aired by Frazier Hunt tonight (WBZ) at 9:30.

LIVES OF GREAT MEN

During the course of these highly inspirational contributions, Mr. Hunt has brought much information about great men into the homes of listeners. Right now, John Garner looms on the Democratic political horizon as a potential giant for Presidential preference. An insight into the career of the man and a review of the events that have transpired to bring him into his present honored position will prove worthwhile radio fare.

'TIME TO HIRE MEN'—WARNER

New York, March 22—In an interview today, Truly Warner, America's largest retailer of men's hats announced that he believed prosperity a fact and depression a myth.

"I'm not firing, I'm hiring," said Mr. Warner. "Business is here. It can be had by the merchant who goes after it, but he can't sit at his desk and expect it to come to him.

Truly Warner

"This is not a seller's market, but a buyer's. The American public has new standards of value. A few years ago people took pride in how much they spent for an article. Today they pride themselves in how little they pay. And they should pay less. The prices of raw materials have been lowered. Manufacturing and selling costs have lessened.

"The retailer who attempts to keep prices near old levels is committing financial suicide. Let him play fair with the public and the public will give him a volume that more than justifies his reduced mark-up.

"I have added shoes to many of my hat stores. Just as soon as equipment can be installed, each of my 35 stores will be selling shoes and hats at lower prices than if I sold shoes or hats alone."

STOMACH TROUBLE
Mrs. Edna Bynoe, 30 Williams St., Roxbury, Mass., says: "I had stomach trouble for a year. My food did not digest and gave me palpitation of the heart. I could not sleep or eat. Two doctors had treated me, but I did not improve. Mr. Julian told me how Dr. Walsh had helped him when he had suffered as I did, and I had Dr. Walsh treat me. Dr. Walsh was as successful in my case as he was in Mr. Julian's, and I have sent my friend, who suffered as I did, to Dr. Walsh, and they are well satisfied with Dr. Walsh's treatment. I am pleased at this opportunity to tell others what Dr. Walsh has done for me that they may know where they may go for relief from their suffering."

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 7 Federal sales tax and excise taxes to replace the income tax, which has degenerated into a racket.

Financing the Financiers Indeed Costly Business

From the day that President Hoover recommended to Congress creation of a reconstruction finance corporation, the Hearst papers have held to the belief that its main cause and effect would really be to finance the financiers and recoup the speculators.

And that is apparently the theory upon which some financiers are now seeking to use the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as a dumping ground for loans that they are anxious to be rid of.

Take, for example, the recent experience of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad which applied to this corporation for a loan of $23,250,000 inclusive of a loan due to J. P. MORGAN & COMPANY and called for payment on April 1 next.

After allowing two small loans to this railroad, the Interstate Commerce Commission then proposed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation furnish half of the additional $11,700,000 which the railroad sought, and that the bankers, whom it owed, carry the remainder.

Was this proposal acceptable to the bankers?

IT WAS NOT.

They speedily expressed their unwillingness to extend any such co-operation and reiterated their insistence that the Missouri-Pacific's notes should be paid as of the date they had been called.

In other words, the attitude of J. P. Morgan & Company and the other financiers who follow them appears to be that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was set up for the purpose of taking over loans which the bankers had made but WOULD LIKE NOW TO UNLOAD UPON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE through the medium of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

This would mean that the mistakes of the bankers would be unloaded upon the people of the United States EXACTLY AS THE WORTHLESS FOREIGN LOANS FLOATED BY THESE BANKERS HAVE ALREADY BEEN UNLOADED ON THE PEOPLE.

This would mean that the resources of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be employed to relieve bankers who were no longer willing to carry loans they had previously advanced.

This would mean, that instead of co-operating with the Government and the people to save their railroads from bankruptcy, some bankers at least appear to be greedy and unpatriotic enough to threaten the railroads with bankruptcy and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with failure unless these bankers can get their pound of flesh.

Of course it is too much to expect that the Hoover Administration will call a halt upon the use of the American people's money to finance the financiers, because past experience indicates that this administration in its financial policies operates as if it were an adjunct to the firm of J. P. Morgan & Company.

But surely the Congress, which is now in session, and which created the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in the hope that it might be of some real relief to the household of the nation in this crisis—surely the Congress will not sit supinely silent while greedy bankers wreck our railroads and raid the public treasury.

Demagogy on Parade

The House of Representatives on last Friday gave a fine display of demagogy on parade.

The opponents of the manufacturers selected sales tax made complete revelation of the weakness of their position by their empty and meaningless advocacy of higher income levies.

They would deceive the public into the belief that the money necessary to balance the budget can be obtained from carrying the income tax up to percentages where it amounts to open pillage.

The shrinkage of current payments on account of income tax shows that the limit has already been passed in this field of taxation; and that to increase the rates will yield no returns commensurate with the stoppage of business recovery, which will inevitably result from adding to the already heavy burden which the income tax places upon business initiative, deterring the people from new undertakings, and leading to the cessation of those now in operation.

> "The distinguishing feature of the best tax," said McCulloch, the eminent authority on Taxation, "is that it is easily assessed and collected, and is at the same time most conducive to the public interests."

The proposed manufacturers sales tax has few exemptions. Its burden upon the individual would be negligible. It is the only tax which will prove productive of certain and substantial revenue; the only tax of all those under discussion in Congress whose collection will be prompt and assured.

The opposition to it springs from ignorance and folly.

AND IGNORANCE AND FOLLY ARE POOR GUIDES FOR THE NATION IN TIMES LIKE THE PRESENT.

The New Folklore

The quaint mediaeval custom of having books burned by the hangman may yet be revived by the Law Enforcement League of New Jersey. It intends to drag out of the Camden Public Library all the cocktail recipe books, including the masterpiece of Professor Jerry Thomas, "The Bartenders' Guide.' '

Why not go all the way and burn other pernicious tomes? Gibbon's "Decline and Fall" should go down the chute, because it tells how the Romans brewed mead. Hardy's "Tess" gives full instructions on mulling claret. Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico" will inform the studious how to make pulque and mescal.

"Tom Brown's Schooldays" is pretty wicked, too, for it tells of schoolboys drinking beer. The Old Testament—a best seller even in Camden—has two hundred passages referring to booze of some sort or other.

The drys are too late now. Cocktail recipes are now embedded in the American consciousness as folklore, like wart cures, tin lizzie jokes and how to make pies.

New York Day by Day

Friends of Rich Men

NEW YORK, March 22—It is axiomatic that with millions New Yorkers freeze up and friendships are limited to a handful. The richest men in America have no more than a half dozen intimates. Morgan is said to have three. Rockefeller, his son. A number isolate themselves on yachts in foreign waters.

With enormous wealth comes the trail of gleaners and the army of surething boys. Even close friends are not immune in the effort to get something for nothing. As a result the very rich must resort to the unpleasant barricade of a glacial aloofness.

Many millionaires want to fraternize, but in unbending they frequently become targets for grandiose gestures, requests for market tips and capital to float this venture and that. One of America's greatest writers is an intimate of a multi-millionaire.

In a duck-blind down south in the pink of a dawn the rich friend broke a long silence with: "Do you know why I like you?" The writer responded facetiously with: "Certainly. It's personal charm coupled with manly beauty." There was a prolonged and meditative hush.

Then the millionaire explained: "I enjoy being with you because you are the only person who has ever accepted me for myself alone. You are the single individual, since coming into large wealth, who never asked anything save a simple companionship."

He told of a purely platonic friendship with a night club hostess years ago. He and his wife used to drop into the hotel where she presided to hear her patter. One day she sent him a check for $10,000 with a note: "Invest this for me." He did, doubled it in 90 days and sent her the total.

She, expecting more, was disappointed and friendship faded. Two maiden aunts turned over $125,000 in the same way. He tripled it in a stock and got them out. But the stock shot up 200 points after that and the dear old ladies never spoke to him again.

A yap wagon barker passing the [illegible] white cottage of Edgar Allen Poe in Poe park exclaims with a magnificent flourish: "That's where Mr. Poe wrote 'The Robin.'"

I don't know how department store escalators affect others but just a tiny ride and I cannot regain equilibrium for several minutes. It recalls a cheerful cabin steward on an English boat. As I lay in a wan pallor and trying to cling to a heaving bunk, one popped in and chirped brightly: "A bit tippy, sir!" That's how I feel after an escalator ride—a bit tippy.

* * *

The most leisurely cafe in town to my notion is the Lafayette, brooding so picturesquely on the fringe of Washington sq. Long after luncheon and dinner, patrons linger playing cubito, dominoes and chess. Outside at dusk remains an almost forgotten aura of the days of oiled ringlets, curtsies and sleek cobs.

A few blocks northward was a glittering shop, marking another adventure into mechanical high speed living—a 5-cent electric shine shop. A spic and span attendant directing customers to chairs seemed the sole employe. Such experiments are rather cloying to lonely city dwellers seeking human contact. Most of us have shoe shines in public for conversation with the shiner, a sort of fusion of commerce and chatter. All such places—automats, self-this and self that—somehow recall the gloomy farewell of the tragic child suicide in Jude the Obscure: "Done because there are too many of us."

I prefer the high bootblack chair near the door in the rush of Saturday night at the barbershop back home. There Doc Black rather obscured his professional perfection with jovial sallies. After flicking a quick bolero with his shoe rag he whisked an acka-ta, acka-ta allegro with a long clothes broom and archly inquired: "Goin' out among 'em, Cap'n?" And generally we were!

* * *

The perplexities of mass population proved a further embarrassment in the confusing glow of Times sq. In trying gracefully to sidestep two brightly rouged and onrushing flappers I began to jockey back and forth skittishly. Finally one of them snipped: "Grandpa wants to play!"

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Make Other Fellow Over?

I HAVE a friend. We have known each other for years. Our work brings us together constantly. And yet most of the time our friendship is a miserable affair.

We have many interests in common. We have an honest regard for each other. We are always delighted to see each other. But we simply can't get along. The instant we meet our mutual irritation starts. There is no one big thing on which we disagree, but there are a thousand trifles.

For instance, I'm apt to exaggerate; get smoked up, or excited; make vague, disjointed statements to prove my point. I have a lively mind, but a messy one.

On the other hand, my friend's interests are fewer than mine, but he is very careful and orderly in all that he says and does. His very thoughts are tidy, precise.

You can easily imagine what happens!

I begin to rave about something; make the most dramatic statements; argue all over the lot. Immediately my friend becomes cool, collected—and scornful. He demands authority for such and such a remark. Frequently I can't give it. Why should I give it? I despise authorities! I believe in following one's heart! I refuse to be bound by data and statistics!

All this I tell my friend with increasing violence. At first I am merely trying to defend myself. Presently, however, I am bending all my efforts to showing him up, to making him look like a dented nickel.

Naturally, the hotter and ruder I get, the colder and more polite he becomes. Nasty nice! We have entirely forgotten we are friends. We are, in our own way, trying to get even with the other fellow—trying to bully and wound.

For years our friendship has gone like that. The other day I was thinking it over. We'd had a particularly bitter quarrel. We hadn't seen each other for day . I was resentful, yet lonely. Why couldn't we be friends—real friends?

And suddenly, as one sometimes does, I saw why we couldn't.

We have never been willing to accept each other "as is." We have always tried to change each other into our personal pattern.

Both of us are, in our different ways., admirable people.

My friend's desire for orderliness is a fine thing. His prudence, his conservatism, his regard for detail, his respect for technique and discipline—these are all splendid qualities.

On the other hand, I'm not such a flop myself. My enthusiasm, my recklessness and initiative and independence—they're good and necessary qualities, too.

Yes, we're both good eggs. And we could have a great time working and thinking together if we could accept each other "as is." But that's just what we won't do.

I want to make my friend as excitable and reckless as myself.

He wants to make me as cool and careful as himself.

And why do we do it? Because we want to help the other fellow? No. We don't care a hoot about helping him. We do it because we want to show off and prove our own superiority.

But suppose we could each succeed in our desire, what then? Why, then my friend would be only a tiresome duplicate of me, and I would be only an insipid yes-shadow of him—and we'd bore each other to tears!

How silly it all is—this everlasting desire to make the other fellow over to our own pattern! What splendid human adventures we miss! What tang and color, mystery and fragrance and charm we destroy!

Maybe when I get over this row with my friend I'll be different.

MAYBE!

The Doctor Pays a Call

While we were down in Yucatan a native boy fell ill,
And the nurse at Chichen worried and worked as women always will.
She watched by night and she watched by day and she dosed him as best she could,
With a prayer on her lips that a doctor soon might come to that neighborhood.

Eight of us sailed on the Olive K. to discover in Yucatan
The structures built by the Mayan race, ere ever our own began.
And we stood aghast at the wonders wrought and we tramped their temples through,
And tried to live with the ancient dead and remold their lives anew.

But a sick boy sighed and our doctor heard and away to his aid
    he went,
For a suffering lad meant more to him than temple or monument.
And the prettiest sight that I saw down there was that wise and skilful man
Taking the pulse of a jungle boy in the wilds of Yucatan.

What Do They Mean by Starvation?
By Claude G. Bowers

IT IS EVIDENT that Lloyd George is going to be very annoying to the wise and the good everywhere, but particularly in England. His first speech to his Liberal followers reveals the old genius with undiminished punch and the old capacity for contempt for hypocrisy. He proposes to face and fight the National Government — so-called—and to fight it particularly on the tariff; and he is going after the Liberals who sneaked out of the party for place. Whether one believes in the brilliant Welshman or not, it is impossible to withhold one's admiration for his fighting qualities.

As a matter of fact, the Tories are in possession of the British Government. Ramsay MacDonald is Premier, but he has had to surrender on vital principles to the Tories and there are Liberals in the Ministry, but these have had to stultify themselves on practically everything they ever stood for. Mr. Baldwin may not be a spectacular figure as a leader, but his party has MacDonald and the Liberal renegades in the pot.

Lloyd George prefers to think of these Liberals as "immured in the protectionist settlement" but really "wanting to be rescued." The Labor Party, under the colorless Henderson, offers no prospect of a live opposition in the Commons. But Lloyd George's speech promises an opposition. His slashing attack on "a sham government" gives us that assurance.

8,000,000 Americans Denied Right to Work

Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, who is opposed to the House bill providing an appropriation of $132,000,000 for immediate road building to give employment, has interrogated the Governors of States on the state of unemployment and on whether human beings have died of starvation. On the showing of the replies he reaches the highly optimistic conclusion that not more than 6,000,000 breadwinners have been denied their inalienable right to work and life.

From two States alone, and from Republican Governors, he has it that two million are out of work. This does not include New York, which declined to answer on the ground that accurate statistics are not available. New York knows, however, that more than a million men are out of work. We have no doubt that there are as many as 8,000,000 Americans who are denied the right to work.

More interesting is the wrath and resentment of most of the Governors over the question—Is anyone starving in your State? We may be sure that were it true no Governor would admit it. We have heard quite enough, perhaps, about "no one starving." People are starving. One day in New York City two men dropped dead in the street and the verdict was starvation. It is true, of course, that no one need actually starve—that is, die for want of enough food to keep body and soul together.

But there is such a thing as slow starvation from insufficient food—and this is especially true of the children. There is not an honest social worker in America who does not know that the undernourishment today of millions of children means slow starvation today—and disease tomorrow. Almost every mail brings statements to this effect from some organization doing the best it can for human misery—on private contributions. For two years the richest nation on the earth has been creating a weakened race for tomorrow. It is sheer nonsense to close our eyes to that ugly fact.

$4.38 Per Family Per Week

Governor Pinchot in his reply says that "Philadelphia gives $4.38 per family per week for relief." The family can exist on that amount, but the children cannot possibly get adequate nourishment. There are great numbers of children in America who will die within a few years because of the lack of proper food during the last two years.

But there is only one way to stop this slaughter of childhood, and that is by giving work to the breadwinners of families who are now denied their alienable right to life and work. The House appropriation of $132,000,000 would help, but would not approach the necessities of the situation. The prosperity loan of five billion would mean something worth while.

But Senator Bingham is shocked at the idea of using $132,000,000 from the Treasury to give men work; while enthusiastically approving the setting aside of $2,000,000,000 for the assistance of banks, railroads and big industries.

Our Two Worst Rackets

The American people, who move slowly but surely, are about ready to demand a showdown on the two most disgraceful rackets in the history of their country or of any other country.

One of these is the income tax racket.

The other is the prohibition racket.

Both rackets go hand in hand.

Both breed crooks and criminals.

Both have put the Government into the snooping, double-crossing and blackmailing business.

Both have made lawbreakers and liars out of millions of hitherto decent citizens.

Both support an army of "enforcers," and both are UNENFORCEABLE.

The income tax is a millstone around the neck of the best class of Americans—the men and women of MODERATE income.

The very rich can evade it and the majority do evade it. They can and do put their money into tax exempt securities. They can and do invest their money abroad. They can and do hire expert counsel to "fix" their returns. They can and do bribe Government agents to wink at false figures.

It is the middle class American that pays and pays. He cannot hire high-priced legal brains to protect him. He cannot bribe the tax collectors. And this year he frequently has to borrow money to meet this legalized extortion.

Otherwise the penalties pile up on him and he goes further into debt, or into jail.

Meanwhile the prohibition racket remains with us.

It costs us well over a billion dollars a year in revenue. This sum is turned over TAX FREE to the bootlegger, the gangster and the gunman. This sum is used by them to strengthen their grip on the law-abiding. This sum finances the Capones and the Maddens, makes the courts safe for men of their ilk, protects the machine-gun brigades and the kidnapers and slayers of children.

Prohibition is insanity run riot. It has made this country a criminal's paradise. It has brought wealth and power to the scum of the population and chiefly through the vicious income tax has charged the costs against the great middle class—the best element of the population.

No nation can stagger forever under this double burden. Our country has been staggering under it for years. Today, with industry paralyzed and millions of our people starving, the revolt against these conditions is at hand. That it may come soon is the earnest prayer of every man and woman who has eyes that SEE and brains that THINK.

Daily Bible Text—"What shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ. They all say unto Pilate, Let Him be crucified."—St. Matthew, ch. xxvii, v. 22.
